A QUIET CITY.

Satisfactory Condition of Affairs—Restoration of Order—Rumors of Events.

A greater contrast than that presented by New-York on yesterday and the day before has rarely been afforded. Wednesday was a day of horror, of consternation, of wild confusion; yesterday was one of peace, security and order. The vindication of the law had been so complete, the mob spirit had been so entirely crushed by the action of the Police and militia that the City has not in years been so orderly and quiet as it has been since midnight of Wednesday. Streets and places which are usually filled at late hours of the night with disorderly characters, were deserted and quiet. Ruffians who are generally to be found at all hours defying the public peace, had slunk into their hiding holes. The change was marvelous and delightful.

Nowhere was it more marked than at Police Head-quarters. At 9 o'clock yesterday morning Superintendent KELSO and Gen. SHARPE were convinced that order had been completely restored, and that no further outbreak need be feared. The few remnants of the force which remained on duty in the building were relieved, and the vast edifice in the early hours of yesterday was scrupulously quiet and exceedingly dull. The quiet continued throughout the day, but under the exertions of a large force of disorderly women who had been dispersed by rightful, the furniture had been returned to its place, and there were no signs of the turmoil of the previous day remaining. During the morning Superintendent KELSO, Inspectors DILKS, WALLING and JAMESON, notwithstanding the exhaustive and continuous labors of the previous twenty-four hours, were yet on duty, and actively engaged in returning the Department to its routine duty. Fifteen hundred of the twenty-two hundred patrolmen detached to the force had been withdrawn from the precincts where their few remaining comrades had been constantly on duty, so that the entire force was assuredly exhausted as its chiefs. The men had earned the rest which was at last accorded them, not only by constant but effective service. Every where during the day of disturbance it was noticed that the Police invariably drove the rioters, no matter what was the disproportion of numbers. There was no flinching upon the part of any member of the Police except Patrolman O'GRADY, Sixth Precinct, who was so summarily stripped of his uniform by Superintendent KELSO, and the story in a morning paper that Capt. HELMS showed cowardice is pronounced by Inspector WALLING to be "an infamous lie," as Capt. HELMS was in his immediate view during the whole of the fight, and he knows that he bravely led his men throughout the conflict.

In actual incidents yesterday was almost a blank at head-quarters. The only affair that made any stir whatever was the removal of the rioter prisoners to the Tombs about 11 o'clock in the morning. They were congregated preparatory to being taken away in the rear room of the detectives, and so many men of ferocious and disagreeable appearance are rarely seen together. All were of unmistakable Irish instigality, all dressed in the coarse garb of the laboring classes, and many were stained with the dried blood which had ceased from their wounds inflicted by the detectives when they were beaten down in the streets on the previous day. Escorted by the detectives under Capt. IRVING, and thirty-five patrolmen under Capt. MCDONNELL, the sixty-two prisoners were marched to the Tombs by way of Houston-street, Broadway, and Franklin, and not to parade them to the general public, but to avoid the chance of an attempt at rescue by going through the Irish districts to the east of Broadway. When the Court-room was reached the prisoners were arraigned before Justice HOGAN, and all were temporarily committed for examination. At a later hour local bails being offered in their behalf, nine of them were set at liberty for want of sufficient evidence of riotous acts. From these sixty-two prisoners, the detectives took, when they were arrested in the streets, seventy-eight deadly weapons, most of which were pistols, and those having these weapons invariably had several boxes of cartridges. Those not having fire-arms had swords, daggers, sheath-knives, and one fellow, with murder in his heart, had strowed with all its edges around sharp, thus converting it into a most terrible instrument of death.

The disarming of these ruffians, occurring as it did early in the day, and being done as it was by the detectives, was the means of saving many lives, as it demoralized the wretches who had armed for the fray, as these ununiformed foes presented a danger that could not be foreseen. There were several others of these armed rioters seized by officers in uniform, among whom was one benighted Hibernian, whose courage had all oozed out of him, so that he trembled in every limb when arraigned before Inspector WALLING yesterday. He had been taken by Inspector JAMESON, who had wrested a sword from him, while an officer of the Twenty-second Precinct secured a pistol from his pocket. The prisoner protested that he meant no harm, and was looking for work when he was arrested. The doubting WALLING thought he had queer tools, and assured him that he should be provided with a long job of work in breaking stones up the river. He was locked up at Head-quarters with JOHN E. MCHUGH, No. 229 West Eleventh-street, and JOHN MCHUGH, No. 61 West Houston-street both of whom were arrested, and one of whom, had on his person a list of the names of sixty members of the Fourteenth Regiment Volunteers. Both these prisoners will be arraigned at the Tombs Police Court this morning.

Besides these incidents, there was absolutely nothing to disturb the placidity of Head-quarters, except that during the morning Superintendent KELSO was frequently required to assure anxious inquirers that there was no truth whatever in the reports that there had been a disturbance on the Boulevard, in consequence of the discharged workmen who had gone off to engage in the riot mourning and claiming their places. Nothing of the kind had occurred, nor had any requisition of militia or detachments of Police been made anywhere.

The Scene of the Conflict.

Yesterday morning, on Eighth-avenue, between Twenty-third and Twenty-sixth streets, many curious spectators were gathered to view the houses which had sustained the brunt of the contest. A Times reporter, among others, was on the ground early, and visited the dwellings in detail. Before entering, his attention was attracted by the increasing numbers of the tenants of all classes eager to see the spot now become famous in the history of this City. Carriages and open horse-cars, occupied by ladies and gentlemen, passed slowly up and down the avenue, while others within read aloud the morning reports of events of the affray, and pointed out the places mentioned. Knots and small parties of working men, in holiday clothes, lounged about the store doors and corners, discussing the pros and cons of this one and that, and the strategic scopes of this one and that, and the strategic scopes of others.

MR. AUDLEY, a clerk in the drug-store, corner of Twenty-fourth-street and Eighth-avenue, stated that in his opinion the Eighty-fourth Regiment had had sufficient provocation to fire upon the mob before they did it. In the first place, the men had been stoned and assailed unmercifully by the mob on their way to Twenty-fourth-street. Arrived there they were subjected to still more vigorous attacks. Shots were fired from an upper story of No. 216 Eighth-avenue upon them, and from other houses and roof-tops further up, between Twenty-fourth and Twenty-fifth streets. Men whose names were not known, deliberately threw revolvers and discharged them at the Orangemen and troops. This gentleman says that he saw a ruffian point a pistol at the Orange Marshal and fire. The ball missed its mark, and the would-be murderer was stricken down by a policeman ere he could repeat his experiment. Again, to show the murderous spirit that animated the breasts of the "innocent crowd," it is sufficient to state that this clerk was likewise a witness to the cold-blooded murder of a poor woman. She foolishly waved her handkerchief by way of encouragement to the assailants of the lodge as they went by, and a villain stepped up, placed a pistol at her head, and blew her brains out. These are but a few of the facts given by one man.

Another person, T. W. ROCHE, of No. 263½ in the block between Twenty-fourth and Twenty-fifth streets, said that he stood in the door-way from the time the procession started until the volley was fired, and saw everything that transpired during that time. In the first place, several shots were fired by persons on the sidewalks at the Orangemen through a gap on the left flank of the line. A man who sought refuge in his store from the rifles of the soldiers charged of having discharged his revolver three times at the military and their sharps. Again he positively affirmed that two Irish girls, dressed in white, kept up steadily fusillade upon the ranks from the upper windows of No. 263½. This was corroborated by the person who keeps a store beneath, Mr. KOMMLER, and Mr. ARTWIN, who keeps a fish-store next door. ROCHE also added that several fire-arms were discharged from the roofs of the houses, two and three doors above his place, and from the crowd one man in particular he observed deliberately draw a Derringer, cock and discharge, and return it to his pocket before the Police could catch him. Besides this use of powder and ball, there were never-ceasing showers of paving-stones and bricks, many of which, as our returns show, did very great execution. Mr. AUDLEY and two other gentlemen emphatically assert that Capt. DOUGLAS, of the Eighty-fourth, gave the men orders to fire after he recovered from the stunning effect of a blow of a brick. They heard him utter the command, and saw the harassed and badly-used men obey it. PATRICK J. MAHER, of No. 216 Eighth-avenue, corroborates the foregoing statements of the protracted and dangerous assaults made by the crowd and individuals from windows and housetops upon the procession. All agree that the fusillade did not come a moment too soon, as the rioters were in large force and preparing to close in upon the troops, wrest their muskets from them and demolish the Orangemen. In proof of this ROCHE informed our reporter that many scoundrels were in the alley leading to the tenement-house along side of the butcher's shop, loading pistols and scolding each other for the failure of this plan. Many young men and women in the vicinity confirmed these details and said that there was a well-known coalition between several gangs of rowdies, who had stationed themselves in the different streets from Twenty-ninth down to Twenty-third, to watch a chance when the flanks of the column should have been exposed in wheeling, and then to leap into the interstices and throw the whole into irremediable confusion. The impatience of hot-headed rioters and women frustrated the plan by bringing out the determined action of the regiment. Many estimates have been given of the numbers of the assailants. From these it has been learned that upward of 5,000 people were armed with different weapons with which to do the bloody work. Their organization was incomplete, and position rendered their endeavors to do more serious harm ineffectual.

Almost every house in the two blocks between Twenty-sixth and Twenty-third streets has its memento of the fracas in the shape of broken windows, perforated awnings and doors. Some of them have sustained much damage, and many had their doors taken off the hinges by the persons who were striving to avoid the bullets of the militia. The corners of Twenty-fourth and Twenty-fifth streets and Eighth-avenue were thronged with curious men and women, and where the blood had congealed on the sidewalk, or had stained the steps leading to some basement, a discussion would be held on the manner in which the men had been killed, and whether it would have been possible for them to have escaped, had they wished to. It was the general admission that the best thing had been done, and many even went so far as to wish that it had been more complete. The storekeepers whose windows had been riddled by bullets were making an attempt at repairing them by patching up the place with boards, so that in many cases it must have resembled some of the streets of modern Paris.

The Action of the Militia.

The reports in all the newspapers, yesterday, concerning the exciting scenes in the Eighth-avenue, where so many lives were lost, were necessarily prepared from hearsay, or at best, under circumstances that were disadvantageous to a correct statement of facts. A considerable dispute and recrimination has already been indulged in by militia officers, who certainly ought to know better, it is only proper to now make a full and clear statement of the movements of the several regiments acting as escort to the Orange procession, in order that the case may be properly understood by the public. When it was ascertained by the Police and military authorities that a large and determined mob had gathered in Eighth-avenue, near the Orange head-quarters, with the apparent purpose of attacking the procession, Brig-Gen. VARIAN was sent there with the Sixth, Seventh, Ninth, Twenty-second and Eighty-fourth Regiments. On his arrival at the scene of threatened hostilities, there were indications that men on the roofs and in the windows of certain buildings on the east side of the avenue, near Twenty-sixth-street, were preparing to fire upon the Orangemen. Gen. VARIAN detached the right wing of the Seventh Regiment, under the lead of Capt. MOORE'S company, and sent it [illegible] of the procession, with orders, if possible, firing on women or children. "If those men use violence," said the General "empty your pieces, and aim well." Capt. MOORE moved his company to the point designated, and there remained. As the procession moved in front of the right wing of the Seventh several stones and other missiles were hurled from the opposite buildings, when eight or ten of the Seventh men elevated their pieces and fired. At the same moment [illegible] and a few pistol shots were heard. The Ninth Regiment was then in column [illegible] Scarcely had the volley been fired than the ground held by the Ninth was deserted by them, and the men rushed for shelter to the side-walks and houses, thereby making it impossible for the wing of the Seventh to maintain its formation. The Eighty-fourth, also, opened fire, and became almost as much demoralized as the Ninth. An evening paper yesterday published what purports to be a statement of Major HITCHCOCK, of the Ninth Regiment, in which he is made to say that the Seventh Regiment were compelled to fire over the heads of the Ninth to reach the crowd in the street. Such is not the fact; for the Seventh did not fire at the street crowds, but at men in the upper windows of the opposite houses. Besides, how could they fire at the crowd over the heads of the Ninth? Major HITCHCOCK also says that he saw the whole thing, as he was in front of his regiment, and then adds that when Sergt. WYATT was killed, he fell across his (the Major's) feet. How these two statements can be reconciled will be difficult to explain to military men. Statements have also been freely made that the losses in the Ninth Regiment are attributable to the Seventh, but it is scarcely necessary to contradict such allegations, as they are manifestly false. That the men of the Ninth and Eighty-fourth Regiments acted hastily and ill-advisedly, in a military sense, in using their muskets without the word of command from their officers, there can be no question. Still it is quite evident that the spattering volley given by these regiments, proving so deadly in its general effect, checked the belligerent tendency of the mob, and probably saved many lives; as in a few minutes more the melee would have become general and desperate. The Sixth Regiment also fired on the crowd, being incited thereto by an assault on one of their officers. The Twenty-second Regiment distinguished itself by not firing a shot, as the man received no orders from their officers. This conduct elicited a few words of earnest praise from Gen. VARIAN. That the men of the Seventh were distinctly authorized to fire on occasion, shows the confidence reposed in them by the Brigadier.

The Twenty-second Regiment, Col. PORTER commanding, was retired from duty at the armory in Fourteenth-street at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon, after having performed thirty-four hours severe and arduous service. After reaching the Cooper Institute, on Wednesday afternoon, a detachment of the regiment, under command of Capt. COLTAN, was efficiently employed in clearing the streets of rioters. Yesterday morning the regiment marched to Elm Park, at Ninety-first-street, and relieved the Seventy-first Regiment. It remained there several hours.

The Killed and Wounded.

It is estimated by Warden BRENNAN that as many as 25,000 people visited the Morgue yesterday in search of missing relatives, or to gaze with curiosity upon the ghastly spectacle prepared for them. Those in charge of the dead-house were on duty at 6½ A. M., and until the doors of admission were closed to the public the stream of people flowed in a steady volume. The dead bodies, numbering thirty-four in all, were laid in their rude boxes and placed in rows in the yard for identification. As the troops of inquiring people slowly defiled around the corpses of the dead, the scene was impressive and affecting. The first man identified was TIMOTHY SULLIVAN, who was recognized by a female relative, said to be his wife or sister. The feeling seemed to be very marked and bitter, and there was much excitement in and around the Morgue. The wife of PATRICK SLATTERLY, upon recognizing her husband, fainted, and was carried home by her relatives. Of the thirty-four bodies mentioned all have been recognized except three, and twenty-five have been given into the custody of their friends by the Coroners. The remaining three recognized bodies are to be called for by their friends.

The following is a list of the bodies identified:

Three other bodies at the Morgue awaiting identification, and three more are said to have been recognized by their friends, but our reporter could not learn their names from the Coroner's office since the evening. This completes the list of thirty-four bodies reported as received at the dead-house.

To be added to this list are, Mr. HERMAN C. [illegible] of the Ninth Regiment; PHILIP ACKERMAN, aged seventy-three, born in New-York, a retired shoe manufacturer, and residing at the corner of Twenty-fourth-street and Eighth-avenue, shot in the breast on the roof of his residence. A lady named Mrs. MEANEY, residing on the corner of Water and Little streets, shot through the heart and killed instantly. Her body was taken home.

Coroner YOUNG was notified yesterday of the death of CHARLES PRITZ, at the corner of Ninth-avenue and Twenty-first-street. Deceased was forty-two years of age, and born in Virginia. The Coroner was also notified of the death of BENJAMIN FRANKLIN HENKINS, aged seventeen years, residing at No. 207 West Thirty-ninth-street. The funeral took place at St. Luke's Church.

Many more persons are said to be killed in the fire, the names of whom are impossible to ascertain, which makes at least forty-eight killed in all, so far as reported upon good authority.

A number of the wounded reported yesterday are today to be found in the list of the killed. It is established, however, beyond a doubt that the total of persons injured and wounded by shots and missiles will reach a total of ninety-nine. Much difficulty was experienced in pushing inquiry further than to learn that a certain number of persons were known to be wounded or injured and treated in the different stores in the neighborhood, who upon having their wounds dressed, went to their homes without their names being learned.

At Mr. A. PARKER'S, No. 309 Eighth-avenue, four of the Ninth Regiment had their wounds dressed. One of these persons was Mr. GRIFFIN, a private, struck with a spent ball; Mr. STERN, a private slightly wounded in the back of the head; a man unknown wounded in the shoulder. Other stores were in like manner turned into temporary hospitals.

The flag of the Grand Opera-house waved at half-mast today, in honor of Mr. H. C. PAGE, whose funeral, together with Sergt. WYATT, of the Ninth, will take place next Sunday.

Mr. ACKERMAN, the old gentleman killed on the roof of the house, at the corner of Twenty-fifth-street and Eighth-avenue, was simply viewing the procession in company with a young lady, looking over the breastwork around the roof, which shielded all but his breast. After he was shot he tottered down to the second landing and then fell to the floor. He was seventy-three years of age, a retired shoe manufacturer, and an American, born and raised in New-York, his parents from Rockland County. The funeral will take place today at 2½ A. M.

Fresh Incidents of the Fray.

The graphic description of the scenes and incidents along the route of the Orange procession, given with lifelike faithfulness in yesterday's TIMES, needs no elaboration. But, as is always the case, no two eyes see alike, and the dramatic situation and thrilling circumstances of the tragic pageant. No pen or pencil can picture the entire panorama of events with full exactness, and the various narratives of eye-witnesses will be read with devouring interest. Police Surgeon BEACH, who rendered efficient medical services at the scene of the disaster, and subsequently at the Sixteenth Precinct Station-house, in West Twentieth-street, tells the following story:

He accompanied the Police column under Inspectors WALLING, JAMESON and DILKS, and was near the detachment of Capt. WASHBURNE, of the Ninth Precinct, when the firing commenced. He said that things looked lively as the column reached Twenty-eighth-street. The housetops were crowded, as were all the sidewalks. The windows were black with protruding heads; even the awnings and window-cornices were densely crowded with eager and excited spectators. Most of these seemed to be non-partisan, but a small proportion appeared as malcontents. These (as another person says) were upon the sidewalks and at the cross-streets, and for the most part were evidently armed for the fray with bludgeons, knives, pistols, slung shots and iron bars, which were concealed in their arm-sleeves or under their coats.

At Twenty-sixth-street, there was an attempt to cheer the Orangemen. This caused a very perceptible agitation in the ranks and among the spectators. Still there was no outbreak.

At Twenty-fifth-street an old boot and tin kettle were thrown down from some roof into the midst of the Orangemen. Other missiles followed, one striking the back of the Orange Grand Marshal. Suddenly the air was filled with brick-bats. Capt. WASHBURNE instantly dashed, at the head of his men, into the solid front of the rioters, who at once resisted. The whack, thud, crack of the clubs upon the rioters' heads could be heard a block off. In the midst of this confusion shots were fired, and stones thrown from the house-tops and windows. Several of the Police and soldiers were struck and fell. The next instant the air was filled with derisive hoots, yells and shouts, both from the men and women. Then came a rattle of musketry, the whizzing of bullets the shivering of glass, and the groans, shrieks and cries of the wounded.

With the utmost difficulty Dr. BEACH reached the prostrate and helpless victims, and to his credit, the writer attests, that he did all that could be done, unaided, and in some cases opposed by the infuriated mob. Undoubtedly several of the wounded would have at once bled to death without this prompt assistance.

JAMES G. HITCHCOCK, of New-Haven, Conn., gives an interesting account. He saw the Police make three charges after the first shots were fired from the houses down into the procession, before the military fired at all in return. The very instant that the first shots were fired by the fellows in the houses, scores of those on the sidewalks, who had previously been noticed to keep their hands in their breasts and pockets, drew out pistols or knives. Swift as thought the volley of the militia followed. Four of the dead fell with loaded pistols in their hands, ready and aiming aim at the procession. In the scramble of escaping, many of these weapons were dropped upon the sidewalk, and afterward were picked up by the crowd. The curses and imprecations of these rascals were loud and defiant. They undoubtedly came there to fight, to break the peace, to murder. Hats and coats of all styles were also thrown down. Several of the dead were coatless, and with sleeves rolled up.

EDWARD H. CLARK, M. D., of Omaha, came up-town to look upon the display, not dreaming that there would be any riot. He kept along the sidewalk with the troops, thinking that ample protection and perfect safety would be afforded there. The missiles and shots from the rioters flew before he had any idea of it. He tried to get away, but could not. Women and children were intermingled in the throng. They shrieked and moaned, but could not escape. The crowd surged to and fro, and those in the centre were pushed and almost crushed to death. "Lie down, for God's sake, lie down, all of you!" was shouted by the Police, and they tumbled to the pavement at the very first volley. He said: "I fell in the gutter, near a lamp post. On top of me were two policemen and a woman. I could not breathe. 'Let me up; I can't breathe here!' I shouted. 'Lay still; for if you get up you won't breathe many times again!' Then came the volley of musketry. The balls sent through the leg of my pant, and one opened the skin on my shoulder. The woman was shot through and through the temple, twice through the fingers, and once through the stomach. Her blood was spattered all over us. As soon as the firing ceased I got up and did what I could for the wounded and dying. I think seven at least were shot slightly, and went as soon to their homes. Among the newspaper list of the wounded does not begin to cover the entire number. I cannot begin to tell how many were bleeding, but many more than you imagine. The military did right to fire. If they had not done so the crowd would have killed many more. But the firing awed them into submission. But as I saw they did curse the Mayor. Several threatened to shoot him if he appeared, and I verily believe they would carry that threat into execution. They were as much exasperated in that direction as they were toward the Orangemen.

A number of citizens, as well as the TIMES reporters, who saw the entire battle between the mob and the Police, make concurrent statements. Inspectors WALLING and JAMESON were at the head of their commands, and leaped in advance among the ruffians. Many hand-to-hand contests took place, in which the most notable bravery was displayed. At one place three brawny villains surrounded Inspector WALLING, but his locust whirled right and left like a flail, and almost simultaneously the three skulls were cracked, and the owners went down. The front rank of officers grasped the prostrate forms, deftly disarmed them, and dragged them to the police square, where the prisoners were. Capts. HEDGES, CAFFREY, HELMS and KENNEDY were prominent in the charge. One six-foot-high desperado struck at Capt. HEDGES with a club, but the latter dashed away the weapon, and with a tremendous blow sent the assailant sprawling upon his nose. Two dandies, who refused to "move on" and attempted to stand upon their dignity, were seized by Inspector JAMESON, who clicked their two heads together and danced them in among the prisoners as quick as a well-executed Irish jig. One murderous wretch leveled his ugly-looking horse-pistol at the head of an officer, and was about to fire, when another blue-coat clutched him by the neck from behind, and swung him around upon his back with such force as to send the weapon far away upon the pavement, where one barrel exploded.

These encounters were so frequent and rapid that the rowdies seemed amazed, and their courage oozed away.

Mr. DANNENBAUM, proprietor of a dry goods store on Eighth-avenue, near Twenty-fourth-street, states that while the firing was going on, a stalwart militia officer (he could not tell of what regiment) ran away from his command, and came to the iron-grated door of the store, almost frantic with alarm, and piteously begged to be admitted, which was not acceded to by Mr. DANNENBAUM.

Mr. JAMES E. PRATT states that a large, portly person, about the size and shape of Mr. JAMES FISK, Jr., rapidly "traveled" toward the side entrance of the Grand Opera-house, as soon as the first shot was fired. He was not seen again after that.

The Guard at the Governmental Buildings.

The Government buildings in Wall-street and vicinity were well guarded during Wednesday night. Superintendent HILLYER, at the Custom-house, made no addition to the usual guard over the building, but enjoined the night watchmen on duty to exercise close vigilance, and not permit the entrance of strangers after the usual hours for closing. Mr. HILLYER did not deem it necessary to use the precautions which were employed by him on the occasion of the riot in 1863. Then he had large bombs, loaded with forty-second fuses, placed in each window, and ready to be rolled out among the crowd, where they would have burst and caused fearful destruction. Besides these weapons, the marines and sailors in the building had howitzers loaded with grape and canister. The Bank Note Company then occupied the upper portion of the building, and the employes filled tanks with acid, and arranged pumps, so as to throw the chemical upon any crowd who should attempt to ascend the staircase. Had the rioters gained access to the Custom-house on that occasion, they would have met with a reception which would have astonished them. It is proper to say that Superintendent HILLYER has means at his command for the defense of the Custom-house against assault which are equally as effectual as those he employed in 1863.

The guard at the Sub-treasury was increased on Wednesday night by the addition of nearly all the clerks. Every avenue was closed, and any attempt to enter would have been met with a volley which would have astonished the rioters.

At the Post-office, the guard consisted of two companies of the Sixty-ninth Regiment and a platoon of Police from the First Precinct. Postmaster JONES was on duty in the building all night, as also were the Superintendents of the various Divisions, and the Assistant Postmasters. The force of clerks on duty embraced veterans of the late war, who have not yet forgotten how to do execution with muskets, and they would have been found good marksmen had their services been called upon.

The Rioters at the Tombs.

Lively excitement was created about the Tombs, yesterday, by the appearance there of Capt. MCDONALD and Sergt. DOUGLASS, with a squad of Police and detectives acting as escort to fifty prisoners, who were in custody on a charge of being implicated in Wednesday's disturbances. The alleged offenders were marched into the Police Court-room, and were arraigned separately before Justice HOGAN. The impression conveyed by the looks of the most of them was an unfavorable one, and created a wish that some of them might be punished. They were mostly characterized by rough and hardened Celtic-looking faces, on which lawlessness and religious hatred were plainly stamped. There was a general feeling of approbation at their capture and their arraignment, although some uncertainty prevailed when the question of the probability of their trial and punishment was brought under discussion. The belief was strong, however, that the District-Attorney and other local law officials would hardly dare to defy public feeling by allowing the guilty ones to escape sentence. STEPHEN J. MEANY, of the Irish Democrat, who offered his services as counsel to the Hibernian rioters gratis, was present in the Court-room.

The following statements were made by the Police in making their complaints:

DANIEL H. FOLEY was arrested by Officer IRA S. GARLAND, of the Twelfth Precinct, while in the act of flourishing a razor which he held in his hand, there being a large crowd around at the time. He was held for trial.

THOMAS WALLACE was arrested by Detective Officer ELDER. In the possession of the prisoner were found three packages of cartridges and a box of percussion caps. The prisoner was surrounded by a dense crowd at the corner of Broadway and Fourteenth-street, and was cut and bleeding, as if recently engaged in fighting. He was held.

MARTIN TOOLEY, arrested by Detective FARLEY in Mott-street, had a loaded revolver on his person and was near a crowd. Held to answer.

JOHN MONTGOMERY was running away from the crowd, at Hibernian Hall. He was discharged.

JOHN J. DORIAN was found with a trowel under his coat. He explained that he was a mason

Matters in Porto Rico—Important Election-Results—Liberal Deputies to the Cortes—Influence Upon the Island Politics—Havana Journalism—Matters at Santiago—The Month of Colas—The Vomito.

From Our Own Correspondent.

HAVANA, Saturday, July 8, 1871.

The Republican Secession Party of Porto Rico, which calls itself the Radical Party, but which shares in reality the ideas held by the Cubans under CESPEDES, has gained a most decisive and important victory over the ultras and so-called Conservatives, the Radicals electing fourteen out of the fifteen Deputies to the Spanish Cortes to which the island of Porto Rico is entitled. The Spaniards elected but one man, Gen. SAUR, Ex-Captain-General of the island, and their candidate for the district of the capital, where the Spaniards are in a majority, owing to the large number of officials and ex-officials there residing, and the fact that three battalions of regulars are quartered there, every soldier who knows how to read and write being allowed to vote. The importance of this defeat of the Spanish party cannot be over-estimated, and the shrewdness and sagacity of the opposition in having thus "effected a revolution and obtained control of the island of Porto Rico by peaceful means, breaking the power and destroying the prestige of Spain," calls for the admiration of the public, and shows conclusively that the Cuban leaders could have done exactly the same thing had they been more prudent, cool and patriotic, and less ambitious. The Porto Rico radical leaders, with great foresight, preferred the title of a Deputy to the Spanish Cortes to that of a Colonel or General of Revolutionists. Instead of bursing plantations, they teach and enlighten the ignorant; instead of shouting "Death to Spain," and making a military display, they say "Long live Spain and Porto Rico," while every day that passes makes the Radical Party more of a unit; the people has felt its power, and will not easily relinquish it. The so-called tibios (lukewarms) must decide to join either the Spanish or Radical parties, as a half-way party is impossible and the Radical Party necessarily will obtain the lion's share. Autocratic laws and their promulgation are now shelved among the relics of a time gone by, and the Government in Madrid, no matter who may be in power, will be compelled to listen to the remonstrances of these fourteen Deputies, who as so many votes will always suit as a bone of contention to be used by the opposition party to attack the Government. A member from Porto Rico will be listened to with more attention if speaking on affairs connected with the island, than a member from some Spanish province, who has never seen the island, and Spanish officials will be careful how they act, as their conduct can easily be brought before Congress by these Radical members, who will embrace every opportunity to discredit the officials sent from Spain. I am of opinion that Porto Rico will obtain a special legislative council to make laws for the island before the end of two years, and will resemble in autonomy and Parliament, Canada and Australia. This is the aim and object of the Porto Ricans, and although Spain might grumble and feel hurt for awhile, it is certain that she would not engage in another war on that account, to cause the destruction of the country and in the end result in its complete independence. Even now there are rumors that a part of the Radical Party intends to rise against the Spaniards, but the number of these extremists is small and the leaders are opposed to the scheme.

PRESS VIEWS.

The Voz de Cuba is convinced that sooner or later Spanish dominion must cease, and exclaims: "Are the enemies of Spain convinced that the field on which the Spanish Americas are lost is not the battle-field; it is the field of intrigue—it is Madrid!" The Voz is correct, but what a commentary on Spanish patriotism and national pride, for which Spaniards were once so famous, and stood foremost among all nations, lies in this short sentence of the Voz! And then the Voz, after announcing the election of Gen. SAUR, and modestly asserting that he is worth as much as ten of his opponents, and recapitulating the possibilities and strength of their opponents, comes out with the usual final argument by saying: "Against all the intrigues we will, if necessary, oppose our bayonets." Bayonets alone will not do it, and the immense efforts made at the capital, the threats and persuasions used, and the large quantities of money spent by the wealthy Spaniards and their adherents, all these were needed to secure the election of Gen. SAUR as the solitary representative of the Spanish element in a Spanish country. Two editors of the radical journal El Progreso, and the celebrated BALDIORTHY DE CASTRO, whose political ideas are well known, are among the elected Deputies. The whole number of voters in Porto Rico is given as 19,931, of which number 5,865 are entitled to vote because they pay a yearly tax of $8 and over, while the remaining 14,065 vote because they can read and write. The election has for the present killed the projects of the extremists, whose intention it was to get up a revolution. In a few days, the excitement consequent on the election, the new and pet toy painted with poisonous colors, will have passed away, and then the future only can tell whether the Spaniards will be foolish enough to try and undo what can't be helped, and what the progress of civilization is producing everywhere—the right of man to govern and to aid in making the laws which are to govern him.

THE LOCAL ELECTIONS.

The Porto Rico election will not be without influence on affairs in Cuba, where this same election question is now approaching a crisis. The opposition party in the Spanish Cortes, and many members of the Government Party are in favor of having elections held in this island. Positive orders have been received ordering the authorities to hold them, but the Casino Español and Volunteer element, well aware of the great danger which threatens the ultra party they represent, are bitterly opposed to them, and in accordance with this opposition, the authorities are doing their utmost to delay the formation of electoral lists, and consequently the holding of an election. The first difficulty has already arisen, one which of itself gives a very plain warning of the many troubles to come, and at the same time exposing the peculiarities of Havana journals and journalism.

HAVANA JOURNALISM.

On Wednesday last the Voz de Cuba announced, to the surprise of the populace, a fact already known to the initiated few. It announced the withdrawal, from the directorship of Mr. JOSE RUIZ DE LEON, who formerly held the same position on the Diario. In order to illustrate Mr. RUIZ's position it is necessary to state that all Havana journals are joint-stock concerns, where the shareholders elect the editor-in-chief, who is always a man representing the same political ideas as these stockholders, and if he wanders a little from the laid-out path in his editorials, he is quietly reminded by the Executive Committee or Directors that he must change his course. Mr. RUIZ is an intelligent and independent man in many respects, and as he has different ideas on religious questions and also on political ones from those held by the shareholders, difficulties arose, and Mr. RUIZ could no longer hold his position without degrading himself to the level of many other Havana journalists. The shareholders of the Diario and Voz de Cuba are composed principally of ultra defenders of the Pope, not from religious convictions so much as from a political point of view, strenuous upholders of slavery, which their former education as slave traders has eminently fitted many of them to be, and opposed to all kinds of innovation. The successor of M. RUIZ is Mr. JOSE TRIAT, a rising young journalist and former printer, active, ambitious and intelligent. As a bona fide journalist he is the best in the island, his style being forcible, clear and elegant, and his fitness for the position of director of an Havana journal being further illustrated by the fact that he will write in accordance with the ideas of the stockholders, and deport himself in his writings as a rancid ultra Pope-worshiping Spaniard ought to do, in direct opposition to his own ideas on these subjects. If left to himself he will make a mark. But another reason existed for Mr. RUIZ's resignation—his self-respect and pride were wounded because many of the Voz de Cuba stockholders subscribed liberally toward the fund of starting a new journal called the Centinela, to be edited by Mr. GIL GELPI, the ex-editor and proprietor of the defunct Prensa. Mr. GELPI is now in New-York to purchase the necessary materials, and his journal will, when started, furnish an abundance of matter for discussion, as Mr. GELPI's devotion to the old régime, and his unbounded notions concerning politics and religion are at times so contrary to what we call the spirit of the age that they cause surprise even among the reactionists. On commercial and naval matters Mr. GELPI is an authority to be listened to, and what disinterested topics connected with commerce and shipping he is always impartial and correct.

MATTERS AT SANTIAGO.

Thousands of queer rumors have been in circulation about the late occurrences at Santiago de Cuba. It was stated that Gen. PALANCA had a row with the Volunteers, and had fought them with the aid of the NAVY; that his son, a number of sailors and several dozen of Volunteers had been killed, &c., &c. The following appears to be the correct story: Since the discovery of the Villa del Cobre conspiracy, about two hundred persons, many of them Spaniards, have been arrested, and about seventy have been expected, of whom over half were Spaniards and eleven Spanish Volunteers. One of the latest arrests was that of JUAN COLAS, a rich and respected planter, and as proof being alleged to exist, and numerous telegrams being sent on his behalf to Spain, "COLAS was pardoned before he was tried." This infuriated the Volunteers; the Captain then on guard broke his sword, and the Spaniards who had allowed the trials to go on, irrespective as to who was being tried—Spaniard, Volunteer, and Cuban—swore that COLAS should not be liberated. An outbreak seemed inevitable. Gen. PALANCA being a cool and talented man, addressed the Volunteers, told them that the pardon would be disregarded, and that the trial should go on, appointing Col. CARDINAL, a great favorite in Santiago, as Judge Advocate. This allayed all hostile demonstrations, comparative peace was re-established and on the following day or two days after Mr. COLAS was found dead in his cell, the excitement of the past few days having killed him. Although the Cubans allege that such is not the case, the inquest, however, proved it to be the truth.

The New Education System—Details of the Scheme—The Sunday Question—An Old Statute—Unmasking Work.

From Our Own Correspondent.

LONDON, Saturday, July 1, 1871.

Last year an act of Parliament was passed providing for the establishment of schools throughout the country, paid for and managed by the rate-payers. Hitherto there have been no schools directly maintained at the public expense in England. The municipal bodies have had nothing to do with education, and the State has been content to encourage schools established by voluntary enterprise by means of what are called "grants in aid," awarded in proportion to the zeal and efficiency of each school. A few years ago there was a tremendous conflict over the question of efficiency. Mr. LOWE, who was then the Education Minister, insisted upon "payment by results;" that is to say, he required some proof that the children had really been educated before he allowed a grant. The clergymen and country gentlemen who mostly manage the schools were horrified at this proposal, and resisted it with all their might. But Mr. LOWE was strong enough to carry it, though they had their revenge on him in another way. For many reasons the system of grants, even thus guarded, is a bad one, the chief objection to it being that it is a contrivance for greasing the fat sow's ear. Districts in which there is a large number of willing rich people get a good share of the Government money, because they spend freely on the schools, while poor districts get little or nothing. The new act is permissive in the first instance. It is left to each district to decide whether it will elect a school board and take up the matter for itself, though there is a subsequent power on the part of the Privy Council to see that schools are provided if they are deemed necessary. In the course of the last Winter and Spring a good many boards were elected, and some of them have already got to work. London has not been behindhand in this respect. It has appointed officers to look up neglected children—street Arabs, as the phrase is—and it has also framed a scheme of education of a very complete and thorough character. There are to be infant, junior and senior schools. Boys and girls are to be trained together in the first, the combination is to be discretionary in the second, and in the senior schools boys and girls are to be kept apart. In the junior and senior schools the proportion of teachers is to be sixteen for every five hundred children—an ample staff, I should say. The hours of instruction are to be five hours daily for five days a week. Corporal punishment, though depreciated, is to be permitted on condition that every case is formally recorded, and that the power of inflicting it is to rest solely with the head teacher. Music and drill are to be taught in every school as part of the regular course. The Bible is to be read, with such explanations and instruction in the principles of morality and religion as are suited to the capacity of the children, but without any attempt to attach children to any particular denomination. Children in the infant schools are to be taught morality and religion, reading, writing and arithmetic, object lessons of a simple character, with some such exercise of the hand and eyes as is given in the Kindergarten system. In the junior and senior schools, the essential subjects are as follows: Morality and religion, the three Rs, reading, writing and arithmetic; English grammar in senior schools, with mensuration in senior boys' school; systematised object lessons, embracing in the six school years a course of elementary instruction in physical science; the history of Britain, elementary geography, elementary social economy, elementary drawing; in girls' schools, plain needle-work and cutting-out. The discretionary subjects are to be algebra and geometry; Latin or a modern language.

THE SUNDAY QUESTION.

Chicago, I observe, is greatly agitated just now on the Sunday question. People here are also much exercised on the subject. Regardless of the rioting which attended a former effort to deprive the people of their Sunday beer, the House of Commons last week gave a second reading to a bill for suppressing the sale of liquor on Sunday, except to lodgers or bona fide travelers. It is true the bill was passed through this stage on the understanding that it should be considerably modified, the public houses being allowed to open for two hours in the middle of the day and for other two hours at night. But by this time there were symptoms of a formidable agitation against any further restrictions on the Sunday liquor trade, and when the bill next came before the House it was, notwithstanding the support of the Government, summarily rejected. In other respects the law as to Sunday trading is extremely confused and unsatisfactory, and is causing a good deal of trouble. With the exception of the special enactment as to public houses, the only law on the subject is an old statute of CHARLES II., which prohibits everybody from following their trade or occupation on that day, an exception being allowed only in the case of venders of milk and mackerel, as being commodities which must be sold fresh. Most of the Magistrates refuse to enforce this law, holding that it is obsolete and a dead letter, but one of them, more scrupulous—or perhaps I should say more pedantic—than the rest, deems himself [illegible] since it [illegible] Spaniard, [illegible] Paris [illegible] fore this Magistrate, who has himself no sympathy with the movement, but feels obliged to convict and fine the offenders. For some months past the agent of this association, a converted navvy, or something of that sort, who is now styled "reverend," has been engaged in a sharp crusade against all the little shop-keepers of Kensington and Fulham, poor old women who sell sweet stuff and oranges, tobacconists in a small way, who sell Sunday papers and penny cigars. The reverend gentleman goes about, with a hired "witness" at his heels, takes note of all the shops that are open on Sunday, and keeps on pulling up the shop-keepers before the Magistrate, and getting them fined week after week. One day the Sabbatarian course was much discredited by the "witness" being found speechlessly drunk, propped up against the railing in the open street and in broad daylight. Perhaps with a view to make up for this unhappy incident, the reverend "compurgator," as he would have been styled in the old Puritan days, determined to fly at higher game. So he summoned the Marquis of LORNE's coachman for driving his Lordship and the Princess to church on Sunday. It was argued that this could not be a case of necessity, as the church was only a quarter of a mile distant, and the Princess and her husband being healthy young people, could easily walk that short distance. On the other hand, it might have been urged that if they had gone on foot they would certainly have been mobbed. The Magistrate, however, did not go into that question, for he found that the act specified "artificers," and the coachman did not, in his opinion, fall under that category. F. J. H.

The Right of Reunion—Tone of Electoral Meetings—A Different Definition—"A Republic Without Republicans"—Gambetta's Popularity.

June 29 Correspondence of the London Times.

The military authorities have granted permission for public meetings to be held during the days immediately preceding the elections, in spite of the state of siege. One of these was held last night at the Casino Cadet, at which I was present. The hall was crowded with a respectable audience, and, though all French meetings are tumultuous and irregular in their proceedings, the noise and impatience by which they are usually characterised were comparatively subdued. To judge by these manifestations, the political tendency of the meeting was Advanced Liberal, as the favorite question which was addressed to a candidate to test the sincerity of his devotion to Republican principles was: "Do you place the Republic above universal suffrage?" The first candidate whom I heard reply to this question was a doctor, who, as had already announced, that Republicans seldom were to be found in the numerous medical books which he had written, and who bored his auditors by dwelling much on the advantages of primary education for the poor. They did not see the point of this till he brought it to bear on the ignorance of the voter who, under universal suffrage, was intrusted with the franchise which he was unfit to exercise. A young gentleman's opinion the only persons to whom the suffrage should be extended were those of tried Republican principles; the vote of the uneducated poor should certainly not be admitted to weigh for a moment against the Republic. This latest phase of advanced liberality and toleration was received with considerable applause. He was followed by a young man who attempted to define a republic. In spite of his learning and medical acquirements, he was no better qualified to do this than the rest of his countrymen, and, after asserting it to be Republica, stuck hopelessly, and finally broke down, amid shouts of laughter and clapping of hands, which was as much complimentary as it sounded, for on being proposed to the meeting he was rejected unanimously. M. ATHANESE COQUEREL, the celebrated Protestant pastor, always a favorite with a Paris political audience, fared much better. Fortunately he was not required to define a republic, and wisely abstained from any attempt to do so; and, as for putting the Republic above universal suffrage, that, he said, he certainly did, in the sense that, if even nobody else wanted a republic, he should always continue to want one, even though deprived by the majority of the power of having it. It is an interesting and instructive lesson to observe these fanatic lovers of liberty, who invoked universal suffrage as a sacred right, puzzled what to do with it now that it is working against them, and all in favor of limiting the privileges of their fellow-citizens who may think differently from themselves; this sovereign people abdicating its own sovereignty on the ground that it is too great a fool to exercise it, and invoking the Republican form of Government in a country where there are no Republicans, because it imposes the despotic ascendency of the minority, and offers a system by which the many can be governed, and if necessary coerced by the few. It has only lately dawned upon me why the formula of a "Republic without Republicans," which even M. COQUEREL indulged in, has become so popular. A republic with republicans insures equal rights and liberties, under certain limitations to all others, but a republic without republicans means a government opposed to the wishes of the country, and affords the governing body the privileges and enjoyments of absolute and despotic power. Meantime it is the fashion for men, especially in Paris, to call themselves Republicans, just as people generally call themselves Christians, without attempting to go to the root of the matter. As for M. COQUEREL, the strong point in his speech was hatred and fear of the clerical party. No monarch, he said, could be established in France excepting by the aid and assistance of the clerical party. That party would require something in return. That something, we had a right to assume from the agitation of the clerical party in France on the subject now, would be a military crusade in favor of the Temporal Power, and in view of these contingencies he was opposed to monarchy. It is impossible to deny the soundness of this reasoning, and the speaker could point to his argument by drawing an amusing parallel between the position which the capital of Italy occupies in reference to the country at large, and that of Paris toward France. He was adopted unanimously, and amid loud applause, as a candidate by the remarkable tone of the majority of French meetings that there is seldom any division of opinion excepting between individuals. There are personal quarrels and interruptions of all sorts, but the magnetic sympathy of the mass is so strong that they all intuitively go together; they seem instinctively to feel in which direction the current of sentiment is running, and to flow into it; while if there are discontents who remain so to the end, they are quite unable to make their influence felt, and seldom attempt it. For instance, at the close of the meeting the name of GAMBETTA was proposed as a candidate and received with loud applause. He was not elected as a candidate with apparent unanimity, but I observed many who refused to hold up their hands and looked disgusted, although they did not venture to enter a protest.

Warlike Preparations of the Khedive—Heavy Purchases of Artillery, Torpedoes and Ammunition.

Alexandria (June 17) Correspondence of London Echo.

The visit of the Imperial Commissioner has not induced the slightest modification in the proceedings of the Khedive; armaments and fortifications are persevered with in a manner which leaves little room for doubt as to the intimate intentions of ISMAIL PASHA. In the eyes of those who see clearly through Egyptian affairs, the mission of NEVRES PASHA was but a mystification. The Chamberlain is a highly entertaining and festive gentleman, full of drolleries, and withal reputed honest; but he was out of place in his late mission, and was overmatched by the men with whom he had to deal. ZEGHI PASHA and ABRAHAM BEY nursed his assiduously during his stay in Cairo, never losing sight of him, never giving him a chance of looking about him, but keeping him in a perpetual whirl of festivity from the hour of his arrival to that of his departure, so that the ex-jester never even went outside the city to look into the matters which had given rise to his mission, and left the country matured with the most cheerful impressions of everything connected with it. I will mention a few facts which lead most observant men in Egypt to conclude that the Khédive meditates striking a blow for his independence. Even as regards troops. The imperial restriction as regards the number of these is evaded by only keeping the men in the ranks long enough to make soldiers of them, and then sending them back to their homes and filling their places with new recruits who, in their turn, are dismissed to make room for others. By this means a large number of soldiers and the principality are being made efficient soldiers who can be promptly called together on any emergency. Then, as regards armaments. The Khédive has made a contract with Mr. JAY, the inventor of the torpedoes which did such fearful execution in the Baltic, for a number of these engines to be placed in the Red Sea, the Suez Canal, and on the Mediterranean coast. In one of the Viceroy's steamers Mr. JAY has made a minute examination of these waters, and on his report a number of these moveable torpedoes which, being submerged a few feet under water, are directed in their movements by electricity, have been ordered. Again, Mr. CHARLES KNAPP, a manufacturer of the famous "Rodman" guns, and who has a permanent agent [illegible] Egypt [illegible] personal [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Managers and Managerial Ways—The Mutuals the Champion Club—Its Love of Championship Honors.

No club of the ten championship nines of the country started out this season under more apparently auspicious circumstances than the combination nine of the Mutual Club of this City. That had confessedly the strongest nine of individual players, and having been taught by experience the folly of hoping to be successful without judicious training and discipline, they opened the season under the implied promise to the Club supporters that the new Fledge was to be marked by a special avoidance of the errors of the previous season's management. Well, the nine opened play, and their first grand match was with the new and strong nine of the Haymaker Club at Troy. Like a brilliant rocket, the Mutuals went up the river, astonished the natives with a brilliant display, and marked their inaugural match of the season with a noteworthy victory. Elated with their success, and erroneously imagining that with such a strong corps of players as theirs they could ignore the fatigue and disinterest of regular training, they entered upon a series of game-money contests, first with inferior playing nines and then with nines not inferiorly organized, and of course were thrown incidentally out of practice, and in the end found their previous mettle that they possessed an invincible nine. But they were doomed to have a rather painful awakening to the real state of the case, and the first notice they received was at the hands of their old-time Haymaker mates, who after getting pretty well into practice, came down to the City and polished off the "invincibles" by the score of 35 to 15. This lesson should have been profited by, but it was not, and so things went on in the same old way, until the Mutuals lost their prestige of being the coming champions, and within the past three weeks the croaking of the Metropolis has gradually fallen step by step to a fourth-rate position in the ranks of the championship contestants. For proof of the above we have but to refer to the accompanying list of defeats:

May 31 Mutual vs. Haymaker	15 to 18
June 3 Mutual vs. Atlantic	2 to 7
June 20 Mutual vs. Athletic	3 to 4
July 7 Mutual vs. Haymaker	15 to 17
July 7 Mutual vs. Eckford	7 to 8
July 8 Mutual vs. Eckford	7 to 9
July 10 Mutual vs. Olympic	13 to 18
July 11 Mutual vs. Haymaker	7 to 9
Total	69 to 110

In addition to this disastrous record for a first-class nine, the contest of yesterday, with its defeat of the New-York nine, ends the series with a victory for the Troy club, and they are the first club to carry a match of the championship series, best three out of five, all the other matches recorded as victories being illegal triumphs.

The game of yesterday was witnessed by a large crowd of deeply-interested spectators, and no confident were the Haymaker backers of the success of their nine that they offered odds of 100 to 85 on the Mutuals. Their chagrin may be imagined when they saw the game terminate as it did, with a victory for the Haymakers, and they took the petty revenge of gratifying their ill-temper at the expense of the visiting Club, for as the close of the contest became the theme of the Club-house and the streets of the Haymaker Club, and bus for the protection at the Police the Haymakers would have been readily used. The officers of the Club interposed, but the "pockets" were bound for mischief. This is the first time the Union Grounds have been disgraced by a disturbance, and it is hoped that the Club will promptly punish those of their members who were the participants in the attack on the Troy nine, for it is to their pecuniary interests as well as for the good name of their organization that it should be done.

The Mutuals contributed their opponents, but lost the game by their inferior fielding, as the figures of the score below plainly show:

Mr. Field, of the Evangelist.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Rev. Dr. FIELD, editor and proprietor of the staid old Presbyterian organ, the Evangelist, has heretofore stood up manfully for honest City government. The Presbyterian denomination are sound to the core on that question. The Evangelist has, with all the other papers not controlled by the Ring, been for a long time demanding an honest and clear statement of the City debt and City financial management, so that the public may know where we stand. The only clear and comprehensive statement of the City and county debt and financial management that has for years been made public was the report to the Council of Political Reform by SAMUEL A. HAWKINS, Esq., and published in full in the TIMES of June 26. In that report Mr. HAWKINS states that the figures are all official, having taken them from the reports of the Controller of the City and county and the messages of the Mayor for the last thirteen years, excepting the year 1869, when no reports were made. The facts stated in that report are so astounding that it appeared to many thinking citizens that they could not possibly be true, and since the report was made a careful investigation of the various reports of the Controller and of the Mayor from year to year, and the accounts as the City Hall do this as they could be got at, has been made, and Mr. HAWKINS' figures have been found to be entirely correct, according to the official reports and the books. The floating debt he does not pretend to state, because no one except the Ring has as yet the means of determining what that is. A reader of the Evangelist and a gentleman of similar religious faith to Rev. Dr. FIELD requested him to publish that report, or the substance of it, showing the much-desired and long-asked-for facts, in the Evangelist; but to his astonishment it was declined, and he was informed that instead thereof Rev. Dr. FIELD was on the point of coming out with a long article bolstering up the Ring, who are now and have for the last three years been plundering the City Treasury of an honest $20,000 a year over and above what they show any honest or fair return to the public for.

Now if Dr. FIELD is still, as he has heretofore for years been, in favor of an honest City Government and a clear and fair statement, as required by law, of the condition of our finances, he will not longer refuse to give the many thousand readers of the Evangelist an opportunity to get from its columns the facts stated in Mr. HAWKINS' report in regard to our City debt and the management of our City and County finances.

A TAX-PAYER AND VOTER OF THE TWENTY-SECOND WARD AND READER OF THE EVANGELIST.

The Treasury Ring and the "Evangelist."

From the Nation, July 13.

The City Ring has done a pretty good stroke of business during the week in procuring the publication of an apology for them in the New-York Evangelist, the highly-respectable organ of the Presbyterian body. Nobody who knows anything of the editor will doubt that he published it in perfect good faith, but it was nevertheless an act of singular indiscretion. It was the result, we learn, of an evening's conversation in his own house with Judge HILTON, whom the Evangelist presumes a good man, but who, good or bad, has shown remarkable fleetness during the last two or three years in acting with some extraordinarily and meteorously bad men, and from whom, therefore, it would be absurd to expect a fair statement of the conditions of the City Government under the Ring in an evening's conversation. Any one who knows about the Ring which admits of no denial, as, for example, that its members have grown enormously rich in a very few years without being connected in any legitimate business calculated to account for it in large returns; that various misappropriations of large sums of public money and "jobs" have been brought to light from time to time; that large sums of money which pass into their hands have disappeared and have not been accounted for; that they, for two years, refused in refusing to publish any accounts whatever; that they have corrupted the Legislature of the State and twice its Parliament, is in no manner at all prepared to say that the City Government is improving in their hands, that our Parks are better kept, or our streets better paved. That is the calmly a French Atheist or a Roman pagan; it ought not to satisfy a professing Christian or in America. It is not enough for us that the Government is efficient—we have to see if we can that it is pure; that honest money-minister it, and that neither its honors nor its profits go to knaves, or ruffians, or Whartonians. Civilization demands this of us, and we owe it above all to the next generation not to give up trying for it, however wearisome the task may be. We may be taunted about wanting and never having had no reform, but we cannot refuse to pardon them for being so bad. Such men cannot be foreflown, no matter how the parts are kept, if we mean to keep up the semblance of a moral standard in politics. Of course, we sometimes need many good people's being weary of the denunciation of the Ring kept up by the Tribune and Times, but how do we get rid of it? Certainly not by ceasing to denounce it. Let us see how eternal such lassitude among our friends fails with that paper on any other grounds than those of taste or policy. We think, for our own part, the persistance and pluck it has shown have been deserving of the highest praise, and it anybody finds its iteration tiresome it is simply because its iteration is necessary.

Today, we give the subjoined from the New-Orleans Times, of Thursday morning last:

"The system of labor on our plantations has been so organized as to produce a condition of general content and good feeling, such as few would have anticipated in the years following the abolition of the freedmen's bondage. Men grossly changed, and the planters have learned to adapt themselves to the new conditions and to recognize the necessity and policy of new rules to control their relation with their employed. The mutual distrust which once prevailed has disappeared. The sneerers are reconciled to the fact that the 3,000,000 of the late members of a society of equal social rights. Their rights to good wages, such as, no other agricultural laborers in the world receive; to prompt payment and fair dealing; their claims to educate their children, to attend church and public meetings; to be furnished with the best and most healthful food and to receive kind treatment, they may desire are exercised by them to the fullest extent, and the planter finds it to his interest to encourage and promote their enjoyment of these privileges of freemen. Those who, while rigorously enforcing their contracts, and punctually and even fastidiously keeping their engagements, treat their freedmen, and every old and feebler as the negroes who happen to live and conduct himself in the manner of the absent of the white race, find their great profit and interest therein. They have no difficulty in obtaining and keeping laborers. Some many of our planters have found it a good investment to build churches and school-houses on their plantations. Nearly all of these have established small stores at which the negroes on the plantations can be supplied with such necessaries, comforts, or luxuries as they may need or affect. It has been found very important and useful to provide larger and better-furnished markets for their accessories, and alley or trunk or garden patches, which they can cultivate during their leisure moments. As long as these demands are satisfied, and good wages promptly paid, we are satisfied that the freedmen will prefer to remain on the plantations, where they are so comfortably and happily situated. The result is manifest and indeed, labor. The only serious trouble and discrimination is politics. It is warm not for the intrigues and interference of those wretched demagogues who infest the South, and depend for their advancement upon the vote and confidence of the negroes, and who go from plantation to plantation to organize political clubs and stimulate them to hostility to their only friends and employers, the native population of the South would, in a few years, become one of the happiest and best conditioned peasantry in the world."

Burglaries in Newark—A Robber Shot.

A number of burglaries have occurred in Newark lately, and night before last two houses were entered by robbers. Mr. FOSHER, living on Johnson-avenue, was awakened about 3 o'clock by a noise in his room, and starting up saw a man at the opposite end of the room strike a taper. He took up a double-barreled shot-gun, which stood by the bedside, and fired both barrels at the thief. The man leaped from the window, leaving some clothes, which he had exhausted from loss of blood. Two men heard the screams, and going to him took him to the Station-house, where his wounds were dressed. One arm was filled with shot, and so badly mangled as to make amputation necessary. FOSHER identified the man as the one at whom he fired, both from the character of his wounds and from his face, which he had been enabled to see by the burning match.

About 1 o'clock an attempt was made to enter the house of Mr. AARON WARD, on Clinton-avenue. Mr. WARD went down-stairs in pursuit of the burglars, and fired four shots from a pistol through the shutters on the lower story, and were engaged when alarmed in cutting out the wires of the mosquito-netting which had been left in the window.

Thieves completely ransacked the vacant house of Mr. KINNEY, on Broad-street, on Tuesday night.

THE KINKEAD ESTATE.

Kinkead vs. Kinsdale.—The uncle of the plaintiff, DAVID KINKEAD, died some three years ago, leaving a will made on his death-bed, by which his estate, some $40,000, was divided among a large number of persons, some of whom, it is said, the deceased had previously shown no interest in whatever. The nephew, who had expected the estate to come to him, contested the validity of the will on the question, claiming that the testator's mind had become impaired. The complaint was dismissed substantially by default, and the case yesterday came up on a motion to open the default and allow the case to be tried by a jury on issues to be framed. The Court reserved its decision.

M. Davies for plaintiff; Mr. Hall for defendant.

Before Judge Barnard.

INSANITY AND DEBT.

In re William Hoffman.—On the 1st of January last, Mr. Hoffman formed a partnership with two of his clerks, and, it is charged by his creditors, proceeded, by false representations of the capital of his firm, to buy goods to the amount of $150,000, which he has since made an assignment for the benefit of his creditors. Soon after this assignment, and before the time had expired within which creditors could come in and prove their claims, proceedings were taken in bankruptcy against him. The creditors met proceedings to have him declared a lunatic, and the Commissioner decided that he had been a lunatic for six months. A writ was then issued by the Court, directing the Sheriff to arrest him and bring him before the Court. This writ was made for custody, and his property ordered to be applied in discharge of the debts. Meanwhile he continued under arrest in the civil suits. A motion was yesterday made to have him given up to his wife on the ground that his health was being injured by confinement. The creditors oppose his release, and yesterday a preliminary objection was taken that the Court could not discharge the prisoner on the ground of lunacy; that they could not do it by the common law, and that the statute provided a special mode for ascertaining such insanity, which must be rigorously followed, and which in this case had not been followed, and that even if this practice had been regularly followed the Court could only issue for the prisoner to the State Lunatic Asylum. The Court reserved its decision on this point.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

EUROPE.

The French Government has sent an agent to England, to endeavor to effect a modification of the treaty of commerce of Jan. 23, 1860. Gen. L'ADMIRAULT, Military Commander in Paris, has ordered the theatres, cafés and other places of public resort that they must closed at midnight, as was formerly the case. The representatives from the occupied districts urge M. THIERS to anticipate the future payments of the indemnity to Germany. It is said negotiations to that end have been opened. The Orleans Princes are about to pay a visit to M. GUIZOT. The Tuileries gardens will shortly be opened to the public. The effective strength of the French Army is 230,000 men. BARON HAUSSMANN is a candidate for office at the municipal elections. It is rumored that the Duke DE BROGLIE will succeed M. FAVRE in the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, and that M. ANCEL will take charge of the portfolio, now held by M. LARCY. M. DE SAINT HILAIRE will replace M. JULES SIMON in the Ministry of Public Instruction. The difference between the Egyptian Government and the French Consul-General have been referred for settlement to the French Cabinet. The Spener Gazette says that regular diplomatic representation to France is postponed until after the complete evacuation of French territory by the German troops. A Customs conference of delegates from all European States, to meet in Berlin, is proposed.

The Viaduct Railroad—Will It Pay?

Is the proposed Viaduct Railroad a practicable scheme, and is it likely to return a fair profit to the original shareholders? These two questions are often in the mouths of people who are invited to subscribe toward the undertaking. The Directors, however, have, for some mysterious reason, a strong objection to hearing these questions put. We have ventured to suggest that they ought to be answered, and for this prime the advertisement of the Viaduct Railroad has been withdrawn from our columns. We trust that we shall be able to survive this cruel blow; and if, as many indications appear to suggest, the Viaduct Railroad is only another device for filling the pockets of a few at the expense of the many, we are rather glad that we are not asked to advertise the project in these pages. At any rate, we cannot consent to the theory that a newspaper ought to be bought by advertisements. Part of our business is to publish advertisements, but it is not part of our business to sell our editorial columns over the counter. The Directors of the Viaduct Railroad, like the Tammany Ring, evidently think that the first use of advertisements is to buy the support of newspapers, or at least to induce them to keep silence. This is in itself a bad sign, because an honest undertaking will bear investigation, and does not need the aid of puffs. At any rate, we must continue to make those plain suggestions about the Viaduct Road which we saw reason to offer before the Directors ordered us to cease publishing their advertisement.

It is quite evident that the Viaduct Road is the most costly of all the schemes yet devised for giving us increased railway facilities. The exact route is still kept a secret, but no matter through what streets it may pass, it is clear that an enormous sum of money will have to be paid for property, for compensation, damages, and other charges of a like character. When a railroad company requires a man's house, the price of that house is suddenly found to go up in the market, and so it will be wherever the Viaduct Road may pass. An underground road would have avoided all, or nearly all, such expenses as these—which, perhaps, is one reason why an under-ground road was not chosen. Unquestionably there must be room for jobbery in any undertaking in which TWEED, SWEENY and the valiant HALL are concerned, and they are at the head and front of this Viaduct Railroad scheme. Then, again, the cost of constructing such a railroad as that proposed must be great beyond present calculation. The Tribune, which is one of the corporation papers, has told us, no doubt upon good authority, that three hundred and forty bridges are to be built over the thoroughfares of the City—in fact, that one-third of the road is to run over bridges. An architect must be very "green" who does not contrive to make a very good thing out of a contract to build even one bridge—but 340! Why it is a prospect more dazzling than ever illuminated the dreams of the most ambitious of architects. And then, moreover, these bridges are all to be of the "Saracenic" order,—that, we suppose, being deemed the most appropriate to a commercial City in the Nineteenth century. There are to be two little arches for foot traffic, and a larger one for carriages and other vehicles—so that as much of the roadway is to be blocked up as possible. If the whole plan had purposely been made as expensive as possible, no better style of railroad could have been chosen.

The City puts down $5,000,000, and the Directors subscribe another million. This sum will scarcely cover the preliminary costs—certainly will not suffice to buy up much property, or settle many claims for damages. We may be sure that such of the Directors as are owners of property along the route will take care that their own interests do not suffer. Their houses will not be sold for less than their full value. The six millions already answered for will be but as a drop of water compared with the Atlantic Ocean—the bulk of the money the general public are expected to supply. Now it is almost certain that in so extravagant a project as this, the original shareholders will never see a cent of interest for their money, even if they are lucky enough to get any of the principal back again. There will be call after call, until the original shareholder is tired out, and then he will be glad to get rid of his shares at a discount. The money subscribed at first will all be sunk in claims for damages and so forth. The real expense of constructing the road will then only begin. Let anybody who is disposed to invest his money in the road ask an architect to give him a rough idea of the cost of such a line, including the 340 bridges. The intending speculator will soon be anxious to keep clear of the scheme. Consider the traffic which will be necessary to pay a proper interest on the money spent on the road! No line could accommodate it, even if there were the traffic to accommodate. If such a road is ever built, and we do not believe it will be, years would pass before the most modest interest could be paid. And yet, without even any proper information being laid before the public, people are expected to rush into the brand new office in Broadway, and invest in a railroad which is almost as visionary in its character as a railroad to the moon. Those who do invest in such a project—unless, like most of the Directors, they see a sly way of "selling" it to "greenhorns"—will be considerably more money than brains.

The Misintenders of the Riot.

That OAKEY HALL and his tribe of Bohemians, whom he supports out of the City taxes, did undoubtedly help to incite the extreme Irish party to commit a riot on Wednesday, cannot be denied. There were, however, others engaged in the same game, and thus far they have been allowed to escape scot-free. Considering that we were thus threatened with a terrible riot, and that several lives were actually lost, is it not the duty of the authorities to take some steps for the punishment of the guilty parties? Look, for instance, at the following notices:

A. O. H. NO. 2.—A SPECIAL MEETING OF the above lodge will be held at Washington Hall, One Hundred and Twenty-sixth-street and Third-avenue, THIS (SATURDAY) EVENING, at 8, for enrolling members for the H. R. Volunteers, to parties to be in their Town Hall by next week. All true Irishmen are requested to attend. By order.
HUGH CUNNINGHAM, President.
HENRY GRADY, Secretary.

A. O. H. NO. 17.—OFFICERS AND MEMbers are notified to attend a special meeting on SATURDAY, at 8 o'clock sharp, at the Constitution Hall, corner of Twenty-second-street and Third-avenue, to receive arms and drill for their coming excursion that is to take place in a few days. All true-hearted Irishmen are invited to come and enroll their names.
JAMES CLARKIN, President.
PARSON O'RAHA, Secretary.

There is scarcely any attempt to conceal the real meaning and object of these announcements. That signed JAMES CLARKIN is too plain for a child to misunderstand—all "true-hearted Irishmen" are invited to attend for the purpose of "receiving arms and drill." The Police knew perfectly well what this meant. The "true Irishmen" in question were to be supplied with the means of committing a breach of the peace. The leaders are liable to prosecution, and we would now ask if the authorities mean to prosecute them? The Mayor has had time to get the shaking out of his knees, and will perhaps give some minutes' consideration to the subject.

A Sad Day for Erie.

The decision of Judge BLATCHFORD, which we published and briefly commented on yesterday, puts a stop in one direction to the most remarkable series of frauds ever attempted. Now that there is a certainty of justice being practically administered, it is worth while to glance back at the history of the conspiracy which has finally been exposed and checked. The parties who have been injured in this affair were stockholders of the Erie Railroad. They had purchased in good faith what they supposed to be valid and negotiable evidence of their shares in the property of that road. In order, however, to realize the use of the right thus purchased in this country, it became necessary to have their stock registered at the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company in this City. The stock having been presented, came, in the course of the transaction, into the office of the Erie Railroad Company. While in this office a sham suit was instituted by members of the Erie Ring, an attachment was procured, and the stock was seized by the Sheriff. When, therefore, the agents of the rightful owners of the stock applied for it, they were told that it had passed from the custody of the Company into the clutches of the Sheriff of the County of New-York, and could only be obtained by the adjudication of the suit, in the progress of which it had been seized. The suit was, thereupon, properly defended, and, of course, proved to be based upon no foundation of facts.

It was dismissed, and the property was released. When, however, the owners of the stock again applied for their property, they found that the conspirators who had instituted the first suit had used the time thus secured to resort again to the State Courts, and that in pursuance of an order which has long since become of infamous notoriety, both on account of the person by whom, and the place from which it was issued, their stock had been again seized, this time by a "receiver." Mr. COLEMAN. Astounded and indignant at the facility with which they found their efforts to regain what honestly belonged to them baffled by the Courts of justice, they summoned their defrauders to meet them in the United States Court, where it was known that, pending the trial, their property would at least be secure from further transfer. In the presence of this tribunal, where the Erie chiefs found themselves at once reduced to the position of ordinary citizens, recourse was had again to the insolent fraud and treachery which are the natural weapons of Messrs. GOULD and FISK. At first it was determined to defy the Court, and to refuse to produce the books necessary to the proper development of the case. The attempt was met by the peremptory exercise of those powers of the Courts which these gentry had apparently supposed to exist solely for their benefit, and in no wise for their restraint. Mr. GOULD was offered the alternatives of obeying the call of the Court or going to prison, and he decided not to go to prison. The evidence having thus been secured, the end was approaching: and, to avoid this end, the Erie rascals had recourse to another trick. They endeavored to deprive the property in the hands of their receiver (they fondly regarded him as still their servant) of all value by issuing upon it three million dollars of bonds, exchanging those bonds for thirty thousand shares of stock, and registering this stock, leaving the stock in the receiver's hands the mere lifeless, worthless corpse of property. It is this last fraud that Judge BLATCHFORD'S decision has brought to grief. This "spoliation," as he plainly calls it, he decrees must be made good, either by providing for the legitimate registration of the stock in the hands of the receiver, or by pecuniary compensation. He upsets the theory on which the Erie men act, that Mr. COLEMAN is still their agent, and declares that, by the transfer of this suit to the United States Court, he has become the officer of that Court, the stock in his possession is constructively in the custody of the Court, and any interference with it will be sure to be treated as interference with the dignity and powers of the Court.

We pointed out yesterday the significance of this defeat of the Erie Ring, coming on the same day with the blow struck by outraged public sentiment at that twin enormity the Tammany Ring. What Messrs. GOULD and FISK can do before a just Court, we do not undertake to foretell. But it will seem to most observers that the rascals have nearly reached the end of their rope, and that they will soon be obliged to make restitution.

An Organ-Grinder's Grievance.

Signor MARIO MANZINI, who turns the crank of that servile organ of the "Ring," the World, makes a most piteous complaint against his employers for the way in which he was treated by them in the matter of the Orangemen's celebration. He claims, and as we think, justly, that however foolish and ridiculous they might choose to make themselves in that affair, they had no business to make him and his organ the laughing-stock of the town. They should have agreed among themselves what tune they wanted played before they gave him his orders, and not exposed him to the jeers of the crowd for playing the wrong tune at the wrong time. If they wanted "St. Patrick's Day in the Morning," they should have said so and stuck to it; or if they preferred "Croppies Lie Down," well and good, so long as that was the distinct understanding. It made no difference to MARIO, as he candidly says, which tune he played, so long as he got his quota of pennies. "We would have supported with equal zeal," says the World in its leading article of yesterday, "and from the same motives, the policy substituted at the last moment, if it had been adopted with foresight and deliberation as the wisest course suited to the exigency." Of course it would. The World has already given its masters of the "Ring" ample proof of its fidelity (while under pay) for nearly a year past. It has praised as honest men and statesmen the very men who, before its engagement with them, had been denounced in its columns as swindlers and thieves. There was, therefore, no excuse for the shabby trick by which the justly-aggrieved "organ" was suffered to expose itself to the scorn and contempt of its readers in its treatment of the Orange difficulty. It is not to be wondered at that the World is forced, for once, into the spasmodic resolve of speaking its real sentiments. "We can think of no more wholesome rule in a great emergency than to express our real sentiments. It is our opinion, then, that this whole business of looking after the Orange procession has been botched. It is our deliberate judgment that the City authority and the State authority (especially as both belong to the same political party) ought to have consulted with each other in advance and have acted in perfect unison. It is not creditable to either that one took ground which the other overruled."

These be brave words for an organ-grinder to use; but we suppose that even an organ-grinder may be allowed, under strong provocation, and, in a "great emergency," to speak his "real sentiments." The World has ample justification for even a still stronger expression of its "real sentiments." For, did not its Tammany masters, by their rapid change of tunes, utterly ruin the organ for all time, and present its owner to the public gaze with a head-piece like that of the "translated" Bottom? Of this let the following extracts be the proof:

This determination of the Superintendent of Police has taken after full consultation, of course, with the City authorities, and under legal advice. It will be sustained in it by all good citizens—of all races, religions, and political opinions.	If we had been among the Mayor's advisers, we should have tried to dissuade him from the line of action which he adopted. We appreciated its boldness and vigor, but we clearly foresaw the storm it would evoke, and would have strenuously advised against it unless he had the most positive assurance that the State Government would stand by him to the end.
That the Police have now done this wise and right thing will earn for them the thanks of all men, in the community not bent on riot and disorder.	In our opinion, the other method (HOFFMAN'S) would have been preferable had it been first adopted; and a proclamation two days ago permitting the parade and promising protection to the Orangemen might also have prevented riotous demonstrations.

Men organized on the principles and ruled by the spirit of these lodges have just as much right as and no more right than a band of that Southern Order of the KU KLUX, evoked by the Radicals out of their own conscious needs, would have to march in procession through the streets of New-York.

A Republic Without Republicans.

M. THIERS takes a singular method of proving his loyalty to the Republic. One after another, the declared Republicans in his Cabinet have been sacrificed to make way for men whose political antecedents identified them either with the Bourbons, the Orleanists, or the First Empire. Whether the resignations of MM. FAVRE and SIMON, announced in today's telegrams, be the result of the pressure of a highly conservative Assembly or proceed from the exercise of the personal choice of M. THIERS, their obvious moral is very much the same. It amounts briefly to this, that in France, a Republic must, of necessity, exist on the sufferance of its enemies. The "country party" seems to have arrived at some rough conclusions pretty nearly as follows: "We have lived to see so many changes of government, that we look upon all with nearly the same amount of distrust. We believe mostly in accomplished facts. Those who choose may rank the Republic as one of these. We prefer to regard M. THIERS and his policy as facts more definite and recognizable. Our constituents have rushed forward with one consent to subscribe to his loan; the army under his control shows no signs of discontent; he is on the best of terms with the Pope, and is, on the whole, as good a bulwark against disorder as we are likely to secure at present. Accordingly, a large proportion of our number will probably agree to sustain President THIERS and this state of things which he calls a Republic. We have no special affection for the name, but so long as it gives us a government strong enough to keep down the 'Reds' we shall let that pass. As a guarantee, however, that there shall be no wholesale importation of new ideas into a system of administration which frequent change of rulers has not materially altered, we shall stipulate that M. THIERS shows no weak leaning to the theoretical democracy of our aggressive Republicans. We think, somehow, that the European economic theories of M. SIMON pretty nearly on the same way as the condemned heresies of the Communists. M. THIERS is himself too old to introduce any radical changes into the system that we have, practically, lived under since the Code Napoleon of the great Emperor. We should like to see him associated only with men as old and as practical as himself, and must request him in looking around for colleagues to state that "none of sixty are preferred."

Whether the remarks in the Assembly have given expression to any such sentiments or not, the recent acts of M. THIERS suggest just such an explanation of their origin. The Republic has, for eighty years, been a name to the French people, and nothing more. Memories of bloodshed, of terror, and of national shame, have been associated with it. It has been cherished as an ideal mostly by its adherents; by the people it has never been experienced as a benignant fact. So little convenient are they in France with what a Republic truly is, that they have no popular definition of its scope, and no handy phrases to signify its purpose. In Paris, even since the Commune, they talk of a Republic which shall be above universal suffrage, that is to say, a Republic in which the minority rules. We of New-York could give them some useful hints as to the construction of such an anomaly; but we should also be obliged to tell them that it was no Republic at all. On the surface, there seems a temporary approach to a political coalition in France. At bottom, the discordant elements are as little capable of union as ever, and parties are so much the more divided from the fact that many are asking for different things under the same name. The single name of THIERS acts as a symbol of union among many jarring factions in France. As the ex-Orleanist, with all his talents, can hardly be said to represent any very definite principle, the old series of feuds, with their inevitable circle of change, seem as yet to be only deferred, not terminated.

Foreign Processions.

The events of the last few days must have convinced all sensible men that it is high time to put a proper restraint on the practice of blocking up our crowded thoroughfares with processions.

There is nothing that some classes of our foreign citizens like better than a procession. Stick a band of music and a few banners before them, fit them out with a pair of white gloves several sizes too large, add a long black coat dragging on the ground, and they will march all over the City, and be as proud of their appearance as a peacock is of his tail. Anything will do as an excuse for a procession. When Pat Mahony dies, there must be a long string of hacks and a few hundred friends and a band of music to follow him to the grave. The Fenians are always pottering about the City in processions, by way of keeping up the enthusiasm of the servant-girls, and getting their weekly subscriptions. On St. Patrick's Day the traffic of the City is suspended for many hours, and, indeed, whenever our Irish friends happen to want the public streets, they are at liberty to take them.

We are always complaining that the City is too small for the indispensable traffic which passes through it. And yet, every now and then, the overcrowded thoroughfares are coolly annexed by our foreign brethren who wish to go through some useless tomfoolery in which no one but themselves takes the slightest interest. If Fenians, or any other class, wish to make Merry-Andrews of themselves, why not go to some sequestered spot—say Coney Island—for the purpose? There they might have a good time, and enjoy, in peace, the ecstasy which a procession seems to be capable of affording them. But this is a place of business, and let us by all means keep our streets free from mummeries which can only make the actors in them very uncomfortable, and provoke the laughter of spectators.

MINOR TOPICS.

The public would like to know what agency, if any, the Board of Police Commissioners had in the promulgation of Superintendent KELSO'S (or Mayor HALL'S) "Order No. 47." Were they consulted relative to it, or were they not? Do the rules of the Board authorize either Mayor HALL or the Superintendent of Police to issue such an order on his own responsibility? These are questions which it concerns the Board of Police Commissioners quite as much as the public to have answered. Mayor HALL, it will be recollected, was first made a member of the Board by the Albany Legislature of last Winter. This was done in direct violation of the pledge given by the Democratic leaders to the Republicans when the new charter was adopted, that the Police Board should be equally divided between Republicans and Democrats. By legislating Mayor HALL into the Board, the political equilibrium was destroyed, and the Police, like all the other branches of the City Government, became a partisan organization. "Order No. 47," it appears, was among the first fruits of this violation of Democratic pledges.

A large number of rioters were discharged from the Justice's Courts yesterday, in default of special charges against them; but they did not get off without a lesson which, it is to be hoped, they will take to heart. That lesson is that their "leaders" are ready to get them into trouble, but slow in trying to get them out. Many of those discharged were fearfully ignorant. They had been led into their lawlessness by men who knew much better than they what they were doing. They were not thieves, and could not pay counsel. They were not political roughs, and could not compel attention. They were simply misguided, hot-headed fellows, who knew just enough to see that an Orangeman was a hereditary foe, but not enough to know that inherited feuds cannot be fought out with impunity in the streets. Ignorant as they were, however, we believe many of them have learned that their miserable "leaders" basely betrayed them, and that is something gained.

Assistant District-Attorney JOHN B. FELLOWS, who, like Mayor HALL, is "always ready to make a speech," and who doubtless expects to succeed our defunct Mayor as the parrot of the "Ring," took it upon himself to harangue the Police after one of their "raids," on the day of the riot. Among other things, he said that "it was a question for consideration by any Grand Jury whether the Police, in the discharge of their duty, were not justified in firing upon the mob." What right has this self-constituted counselor of the public to criticise such matters? Was the Police while a riot was actually progressing? Will he not know that no Grand Jury will ever be invited to such an act by Gov. HOFFMAN'S proclamation, and that they would have been branded as cowards by their omission if they had not accepted the invitation? We have no doubt that this man FELLOWS considers it "wholly unwise" for Union soldiers to turn out to protect their Government when it was engaged in the capacity of a rebel Colonel, in trying to destroy it.

An evening paper wants to know if the "display of the rights of the SIXTY-SIX or ninety-odd Orangemen who turned out July 12, 1871, were worth the lives of the policemen, the soldiers, the women, the child, and the innocent citizens killed and wounded," were not sacrificed or endangered to maintain any right. They were sacrificed to the motive—probably correctly—which led them to a spot where everybody knew there was danger, and where common prudence should have kept them from venturing. In the next place, the right maintained at the cost of the lives of the policemen and soldiers was not merely that of the Orangemen to parade as other citizens are allowed to do. It was the right of this community, through its military and Police, to defeat such processions as may be formed. If was the defenders of the procession who were attacked, and through them the very principle of law. Precious as are the lives of the dead defenders of the law, the law itself, in this yet free City, is still more so.

Will the members of the "Union League, County Council," of the Produce Exchange, and of any other organizations who may have passed resolutions condemnatory of the course of Tammany and Mayor HALL in issuing "General Order No. 47," remember that to get rid of the men who have betrayed and disgraced us, votes are no less necessary than resolutions? It is therefore highly desirable that all such indignant citizens should at finally make the further resolve to keep from the memory of the crowning shame of July 12, 1871, till New-York is rid of the men who added this to many previous humiliations.

A petition is said to be in course of signature calling for the immediate resignation of Mayor HALL. The independent citizens of New-York, of both parties, have had enough of his pretentious ruggedness and demoralizing policy, and if he can be got rid of in this way, the petition is not likely to want for signatures.

Those zealous Protestants who swallowed with open arms the entrance of Father HECKEWELDER into the fold of their own church, are doomed to continued disappointment. That excellent man, in a letter in this week's Independent, says that he "must remain constant to the immovable faith of the Catholic Church, and the primitive faith of the Church at Rome." But, he adds, "I refuse my adhesion to the pretended dogmas, new and heretical, of the Papal infallibility. I refuse to recognize as really free and legitimate, the pretended Ecumenical Council, in which—I am certain of it—history will see only a strategical ambuscade and a political intrigue." Surely no man can regret that Father HECKEWELDER finds it possible to hold to the Catholic faith and to these ideas also. The greater the number who can imitate this example, the better for Catholicism and the world.

WASHINGTON.

The Internal Revenue Bureau and the Treasury Department—The Wheeler Finance—Reduction of the Money-Order System to Great Britain.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 13.—Secretary BOUTWELL arrived here to-night at 8 o'clock. It is generally supposed that some new developments in regard to the Revenue Bureau will speedily follow the Secretary's return, but up to this time the condition of the affair, so far as is known, remains precisely as it was at the close of last week. As stated in these dispatches of Saturday evening last, Collector FORD, of New-York, was here today at the special request of Commissioner PLEASONTON, and it is understood on business other than that connected with his district. Its nature, however, is not explained.

DISTRICT FINANCES.

According to documents sent to the District Legislature today, by Controller HARRIS, the cash receipts at the Corporation of Washington for the year ending June 30, 1871, were $1,537,270 42. The receipts were $9,488 50 in excess of warrants issued for expenditures.

MRS. WHARTON'S ARREST.

The arrest of Mrs. WHARTON, of Baltimore, on the suspicion of her having caused the death by poison of the late Gen. KETCHUM, has created a great deal of excitement in this city, where she and her parties were all well known. Mrs. WHARTON has been held in high esteem in the best circles here, and it is not generally believed she can be guilty of the charges against her.

THE SOUTHERN COMMITTEE.

It is stated the Ku-klux Committee will certainly adjourn next week.

Dispatch to the Associated Press.

ANOTHER KUKLUX WITNESS.

The Kuklux Investigating Committee today examined Judge A. R. WRIGHT, of Rome, Ga., ex-member of both United States and Confederate Congresses. He believed in the existence of Kuklux organizations, and said it was originated for police purposes, to restrain disturbances likely to grow out of disorderly conduct of the negroes. The latter had behaved much better than was expected, and the Kuklux had sometimes gone beyond the purpose of their organization, which was not political, although being composed exclusively of conservatives, it might occasionally have more effect. He was opposed to secession, and [illegible] President LINCOLN after the overthrow of Rebellion. He was [illegible] at the assassination of the President, but could not feel entirely sorry to see the Government while burdened with political disabilities and not allowed to participate in all its advantages.

MONEY ORDERS TO AND FROM ENGLAND.

Articles of a convention for the exchange of postal money orders between the United States and Great Britain have been received at the Post-Office Department. The convention is duly executed on the part of the United Kingdom, and now awaits execution by the Postmaster-General and the President. The interchange of postal money orders is to begin Oct. 1, and it will require a considerable effort to prepare the blanks and make the necessary preliminary arrangements before that time. The limit of a single money order will be $50, or £10 sterling.

YALE COLLEGE.

The Alumni Meeting—An Improvement Suggested—Yale Progress—Death of Professor Kingsley.

From Our Special Correspondent.

NEW-HAVEN, Wednesday, July 12, 1871.

Today tells not entirely to the Alumni, and was devoted to their interests and those of the various classes. The attendance at the former, which took place in the morning at Alumni Hall, was not large—mild and muggy years, and the proceedings were, consequently, of more than usual interest. Prof. PORTER, the President-elect, was in hand to receive the congratulations of his friends. Among the many duties and the pleasures of the day, Mr. DANIEL TREAT, class of 1809, the United living graduate of Yale from the commencement of the present century, Dr. DWIGHT, of Yale, Mr. CHAUNCEY M. DEPEW, Hon. GIDEON WELLS, class of 1814, Hon. THEODORE WOOLSEY, Rev. Dr. J. F. THORNTON, Gen. THOMAS SIDNEY, class of 1816, Rev. Dr. LEONARD BACON, of New-Haven, Professor [illegible], of Princeton, Judge CHILDS, class of 1817, Hon. JOSEPH HOW, Rev. Dr. J. P. THOMPSON, Gen. THOMAS of New-York, Colonel [illegible], of Providence, Rev. Dr. ELLIOTT, of Brooklyn, Rev. Dr. BUSHNELL, the oldest surviving graduate of the last century are: Class of 1796, TIMOTHY DWIGHT, New-Haven; Class of 1797, Oct. 27, 1871; Class of 1801, the Rev. THOMAS WILLIAMS, Providence; Rev. [illegible], born May 27, 1776.

A hymn prepared for the occasion by Mrs. FISCH, of 1849, was then sung to the tune of [illegible]; Rev. GEORGE ADAMS, of 1821, leading the music. The Chairman then announced the resignation of President WOOLSEY, and paid a tribute to the efficiency of his Administration, and requested Prof. THACHER to make some remarks on this event.

Prof. THACHER said he stood alone of those who were in the Faculty when he entered it. Forty years ago he entered as a Freshman when President WOOLSEY began his career as a Professor. He was glad to testify to his merits, and to the learning of President WOOLSEY, and to the glory of his career. He presented to the College a portrait of the President, with a glowing eulogy. Age had never diminished its efficiency, and even in the last year had he not been an authority for Governments both here and over the water? Had there not been progress for the last forty years? The expenses of the College in 1831 were $20,000, and the income $19,000; the property of the College was $14,000 at that time. The income after an existence of 121 years was a little over $2,000. He would not detail the prosperity of the College today. Progress was seen everywhere. Seven new Professors are created by the Corporation today. More Professors created the day President WOOLSEY resigned than the entire College had for 122 years. He alluded to the new and unequaled schools of science, fine arts, philology and a new school of pure mathematics. He claimed that the College grew with but little noise. They had here the reality of a University according to the idea of the learned everywhere. The Professor elaborated the University idea, and thought its complete development was due to President WOOLSEY. It was growth to be proud of, because it destroyed nothing.

Rev. Dr. BACON spoke on the same subject, and said that he was not ashamed of his age and did not care to play the young man. He was the only man alive who participated in the election of President WOOLSEY. He would transmit from the corporation to the Alumni some resolutions entered on their minutes relative to President WOOLSEY'S retirement.

The Chairman then said that the new President would have his say on the following day, after dinner. The Secretary read a resolution passed by the Cleveland Alumni Association June 5, announcing gratification at the advancement of the College, and congratulated President WOOLSEY on his laborious and useful life.

After some other addresses by CASSIUS M. CLAY, Rev. Dr. BARROW, of Boston, read a poem, the subject of which was the "Changes at Yale." It was cut short in order to meet the occasion.

The Secretary made the following announcements: First, an offer was made of $5,000, if $50,000 more were given in a year, to constitute a Professors' fund. Another gentleman present did the same, and sent his check for $5,000. They both would give $60,000 if $50,000 were raised. Secondly, Hon. G. F. WINGHAM, had purchased an extensive tract of land, the income from which, when sold in small lots, he would devote to the maintenance of an observatory. Mr. WINGHAM'S gift out of his pocket amounted to $50,000. It was expected the amount would be doubled. The land is at the head of Hillhouse-avenue, and comprises forty acres of land in the best and highest part of the city.

Prof. THACHER called attention to the means suggested to the Class of 1820 for perfecting a system of class subscriptions. Mr. HAWES, of 1820, followed the Professor, and announced that he spoke for "young Yale." He thought his constituency were satisfied with the recent changes, and they felt that money was needed, and as a class they offered $5,000 to the general fund, and advised other classes to do likewise.

Senator BUCKINGHAM being called on, said his presence was due to the interest he felt in Yale. He found her graduates everywhere, and believed that their influence was mainly exerted for that which was good and right. In connection with the subject of the Alumni representation, he said one of the chief duties of the corporators was to give largely of their money. The wisdom of money was the wisdom needed. Mr. S. HINMAN, of 1816, Rev. Dr. THOMPSON, and others addressed to the peremptory summons of the chairman.

REGATTA AT THE LAKE.

In the afternoon the regatta took place on Lake Saltonstall, in the presence of an exceedingly large crowd of spectators. Many went to the lake in carriages, but the vast majority preferred the more plebeian comforts of a railroad car. The first race was a two-mile sprint for double-sculls for a pair of silver pitchers, Messrs. D. F. BRAINARD and G. E. MARTIN, of the Class of 1872, and Messrs. C. M. GRIS and G. E. MUNROE, of 1873, were the contestants. The latter crew allowed thirty seconds start to their opponents, who won the race with ease in 16:10. Time of the other crew, 17:07. The second race was a two-mile single-scull race for which there were five entries; Messrs. J. B. MILLS, of 1872, W. F. HALL, of 1872; F. S. TOWN-of 1870; J. W. Smith, of 1870, and C. Phelps, of the Law School. The race was won by Phelps in 20 min. 40 sec.; Smith ran second in 20 min. 45 3-5 sec.; Mills third, in 21:17; W. P. Hall fourth, in 21:36; and F. H. Perry last, in 21:56. It was expected that PERRY would win, but for some unknown reason he did worse than any. The best race was a three-mile shell race between the Sophomores and Scientifics, and was easily won by the latter in 19:00—very poor time.

In the evening the Class of 1866 held their triennial and enjoyed a supper at the New-Haven House. About seventy-five were present, and as they rendered about the impossibility for most of the guests in the hotel, it is to be presumed that they had a good time. Several fellow-classes had reunions at the same time. A reception for the graduates and their friends was also held at the Art Gallery, and the Yale Glee Club gave a concert at Music Hall.

THE DAY.

To the Sophomore declamations last night the prizes were taken in the following order: C. F. HASTING, S. F. WILLIAMS and F. H. TAMBLYN. At the election for President yesterday W. M. WOOLSEY received one vote.

The following elections to the Faculty were made: Prof. LOUNSBURY to be Professor of English Literature in the Scientific School; HARRY A. RUSSELL, Tutor in English Literature; H. P. WELSOR, Assistant Professor of Latin; EUGENE RICHARDS, Assistant Professor of Mathematics; THOS. HOOKER and EDWARD HEATON, Tutors.

To-morrow is Commencement Day proper.

Commencement Day—The Faculty Reception—What it Contains—List of the Graduates—The Class of 1861—The Alumni Dinner—Speeches by Prof. Porter and Gov. Jewell—Some Rather Stone—Honorary Degrees.

From Our Special Correspondent.

NEW-HAVEN, Thursday, July 13, 1871.

Commencement Day opened auspiciously so far as the weather was concerned, but to call it warm but faintly conveys an idea of the heat. However, like a good many other things, it only comes once a year, and as the intolerable heat and many other discomforts of this overcrowded city become perfectly tolerable. The Yale Glee Club concert last evening was one of the finest entertainments ever given by students in that line. The singing was excellent, and there was no tedious delays to try the patience of the large audience. It is the best glee club Yale has had for many years.

I alluded, in my last, to a pamphlet circulated among the Alumni at their meeting, presided by the different faculties with reference to a university system. As everything connected with Yale College is of public interest at present, I send you a brief abstract of its contents. The pamphlet opens with the following statement:

"The permanent officers in the various departments of Yale College have united in proposing to the corporation that the Professorship with the President, the Professorship of Sanscrit, and Registrar, be recognized as a University Council, whose duty it shall be to consider unitedly the interests of the University and of its several departments, to communicate their views at their pleasure to the corporation, and annually to lay before that body a full report of the condition of the University in all its parts." A reference to the changes made during President WOOLSEY'S administration follows, and it is then stated that "of the four several 'Faculties,' which co-exist in all the ancient universities of Europe—Theology, Law, Medicine, and Philosophy or the Arts and Sciences—one can be regarded as semi-plenarily developed in the Yale of to-day, the four which have come into existence under the charter of Yale College. The charter gives to the corporation the powers of a university, and these were exercised both by providing [illegible] by its learning as well fitted to fill the chair, and to be present on this session to bear my testimony to the zeal, fidelity and ability with which for [illegible] and retiring, President has presided over this institution for a quarter of a century. Having brought to the work rare qualifications of both mind and heart, he has raised still higher a position made very honorable by his illustrious predecessor. By his uniform urbanity of manner, he has gained the affection and esteem of all, both in and out of the College. By his firmness of and devotion to principle he has raised the standard of morals and religion in the community in which you have lived. By the thorough training of the large number of young men which have come under his instruction he has conferred a signal service upon the State and nation. By his clear analysis and exposition of international law, he has contributed largely toward the moulding of the opinion and action of the public in the right direction. From the high position I now hold, made still more honorable by the influence of his life and acts, I wish to thank him in the name of the State of Connecticut for what he has been, for what he has done, for what he is.

The next sentiment was "President WOOLSEY," his pupils offered him their tribute of love."

President WHITE, of Cornell, responded to this toast. He said that he felt and knew that President WOOLSEY had the love and gratitude of all the sons of Yale. In eloquent language Mr. WHITE paid a tribute to the worth of the retiring President.

Several other speakers responded to different toasts before the meeting adjourned.

SOME REFLECTIONS.

Now that Commencement week is over I have a few general remarks to make, and in the first place I wish to tender my thanks to the gentlemen of the New-Haven House for courtesies extended. As a time calculated to try men's patience and every other virtue in the utmost, I have found them ready to oblige and genial and pleasant to all. Not only is the hotel first-class in every respect, but it has gentlemen for clerks, which is an exception to any hotel rule I have yet discovered. With regard to Yale, its prospects are bright and its one hundred and seventy-first Commencement has been brilliant and successful. That it has made the wisest choice in its election of a new President I do not venture to say, but fettered as it is by rules, laws and regulations of a century ago, it has perhaps made the best choice possible.

Commencement of Burlington College, New-Jersey.

This institution closed its twenty-fourth year on Tuesday last. At 8 A. M., on that day, after the customary service in the new chapel, which has lately been opened and fitted up, the various forms were successively called into the largest class-room and examined by the rector and Professors, in the presence of Right Rev. Dr. ODENHEIMER, the President, a large number of the reverend clergy and others, patrons and friends of the institution, including quite an array of ladies. Great thoroughness in discipline, drill and study was evinced in these several examinations.

At 2½ P. M., all repaired the chapel, when prizes were awarded to the first and second students in general average throughout the scholastic year. The successful boys were JOHN DOWS HILLS and EUGENE JEFFRY BABCOCK. Following this, the several forms were called forward and promoted, in a few appropriate words by the Right Reverend President. At the dinner Bishop ODENHEIMER presided, and, at its close called upon Rev. JAMES W. BRABIN and Rev. HOBART CHETWOOD, former rectors of the College, and Rev. GEORGE MORGAN HILLS, of St. Mary's Parish, Burlington, who made stirring speeches.

In the evening, the chapel was again filled, to listen to an oration from an old graduate, C. WILLING LITTELL, Esq., of Philadelphia, who, in an uncommonly finished production, held the attention of all for nearly an hour.

Burlington College enjoys an ample domain and excellent buildings on the Delaware River, a spot not only accessible, but healthful and most attractive. Its proximity to St. Mary's Hall enables parents who have both sons and daughters to place their children near each other. Under the efficient management of its present rector, Rev. CHARLES F. ROBERTS, it has rapidly increased in numbers and interest during the past year, and promises more for the future.

Amusements—The Thomson Troupe.

Mr. SAMUEL CORNELIUS has been advised of the almost complete formation of Miss LYDIA THOMPSON'S troupe, to appear at Wallack's on or about Aug. 7 next. The artists engaged are Miss Hetty Tracey, soubrette; Miss Zullini, contralto vocalist; Miss Camille Dubois, prima donna; Miss Bellew, Miss Egerton, Miss Lotta Mira, burlesque performers, from the London Theatres; Messrs. Harry Beckett, Willie Edouin, and W. H. Montgomery, comedians, and Mr. Michael Connolly, musical director.

THE RECENT RIOT.

and worked in Cherry-street. He was discharged.

WM. DALTON, Jersey City, was found running through the street with his head cut and bleeding. He was discharged.

BERNARD MCGUILDRAS, a reporter of the Star, was found with a "billy" under his coat. He was held.

THOMAS COLEMAN was inciting a crowd of men at Hibernian Hall to attack the Police. A billy was found in the side pocket of his coat. He was held.

JOHN DEERY, arrested in Fourth-street, in the midst of an excited crowd, on being searched a six-barrel revolver was found in his possession. Held to answer.

SAMUEL SAPULEY was arrested by Detective Officer HEIDELBERG. The prisoner was standing in a crowd. The officer asked him had he any weapons. He said not. On being searched, however, a club or billy was found concealed in the inside pocket of his vest. He was held.

THOMAS LEEN was arrested by the same officer. The prisoner had in his possession a pistol loaded with powder and ball, and capped. He at first denied having any weapon. He was held.

Detective PHILIP LAMBRECHT, of the Nineteenth Precinct, arrested PATRICK J. KELLY in a crowd on Fourth-avenue as the procession was passing. One man shouted out: "Now let us give it to the ——s." The prisoner thereupon exhibited a pistol, capped and loaded with powder and ball. He was held.

PATRICK KELLY was found with a stone in his hand, which he said he intended to throw at the Orangemen. He was held.

PATRICK POWERS was arrested on the corner of Twenty-seventh-street and Eighth-avenue, while gesticulating wildly and denouncing the procession. On searching him, a loaded pistol was found in one of his pockets. He was held.

EDWARD DURFER was captured by Officer COLE, of the Fifth Precinct, while standing in the crowd at the corner of Tenth-street and Broadway, with a horse-pistol in his possession.

EDWARD LAMB assaulted Officer CLAPP, of the Eleventh Precinct, while the latter was keeping order. He was held.

THOMAS GILMARTIN had his life saved from a mob in Fourth-street. After his escape he armed himself with a knife and went around vowing vengeance. He was held.

JOHN FALON was caught in Tenth-street with a pistol and cartridges in his possession. Held.

JOHN CONROES was found in Lafayette-place carrying a pistol and trying to incite a riot.

CORNELIUS MAHONY was seized by Officer COYLE, of the Eleventh Precinct, while displaying an instrument. Held.

The following men were also committed on similar charges: Michael Norton, Henry F. Gibney, John McCarthy, William Devins, Sherman Bellington, John McCabe and Patrick O'Mahony.

Most of the prisoners were unable to find bail, and were ordered to be locked up. The sitting [illegible]

[illegible] Police Court was filled yesterday by a large crowd of persons in expectation of the examination of the rioters arrested the previous day. Judge SHANDLEY, the presiding justice, manifested a decided disposition to treat the offenders with sharp justice, and promptly committed them for trial at the Court of General Sessions. PATRICK HOGAN, a laborer, residing at One Hundred and Twenty-fifth-street, was charged by Capt. HEDDEN, of the Fifteenth Precinct, with addressing an excited crowd from the steps of the Station-house, and calling upon them to rescue their comrades who had been arrested. Capt. HEDDEN promptly arrested and put him into the cell. Justice SHANDLEY committed him for trial to the Court of General Sessions.

JOHN HENRICKS, of No. 22 Amity-street, was arrested by Officer TWINE while acting in a riotous manner in Fourth-avenue, near Thirteenth-street. A dirk-knife's last long was found in his possession. He was committed.

Officer GILLESPIE arrested THOMAS O'NEILL at the corner of Twenty-third-street and Fifth-avenue for participating in the riot. He seemed to be a ringleader. A revolver loaded and capped was discovered in his possession. He was committed.

FRANCIS KERLY advanced from the centre of a riotous crowd at the corner of Twenty-first-street and Fifth-avenue brandishing a loaded revolver. He was arrested by Officer HEVAL, who a small six-chambered revolver was also found with him. Committed for trial.

The following names were presented in the Police returns from the Fifteenth Precinct yesterday, for complicity in the riot of Wednesday, but up to the closing of the Court in the afternoon, the prisoners were not brought in for examination: Edward Dwyer, No. 329 Eighth-avenue; Thomas Kilmartin, Brooklyn; Thomas Ryan and Thomas Lynch, No. 161 West Thirty-ninth-street; Patrick O'Mahoney, Brooklyn; Francis McDermott, West Thirty-Eighth-street; Peter J. Kelly, Fifty-second-street; Hugh Deering, One Hundred and Twenty-third-street; Frank Russel, No. 293 First-avenue; John Cottie, Henry F. Gibney, Arthur McClimmey, Brooklyn; Patrick Powers, Forty-first-street; Michael Cox, No. 26 Orchard-street; James McDonald, Brooklyn; William Devine, No. [illegible] street, and William O. Quire, Fourteenth-street.

The Secretary System of the Rioters.

Last evening a TIMES reporter was commissioned to interview Judge GARVIN with regard to the action to be taken for the punishment of the rioters arrested in connection with the Orange-Papist riot and the measures to be adopted for the repression of similar disturbances in the future. On making inquiry at his residence he ascertained that the Judge had gone off to Niagara Falls with his family, and our reporter extending his labor required to the dwelling of Recorder HACKETT, in Park-avenue, to obtain his views on the subject. The Recorder treated him courteously, and on the purpose of the visit being made known, entered immediately into an expression of his opinion concerning the affray on the 12th. He stated that in respect of the riot itself it was unnecessary to express an opinion, as there was hardly a dissenting voice with regard to it. He had no intimation whatever from the prosecuting officers as to the action they proposed to take for the punishment of the rioters, and in criminal prosecutions generally, he said, he was not acquainted with the nature of the calendar until the day when it was presented for trial. On the contrary, to avoid prejudice to the injury of the prisoner, he studiously refrained from obtaining any information in regard to a case until it was formally developed by the evidence. It was only in great cases, like the McFarland trial, that he consulted with the District-Attorney, and invariably formed a judgment exclusively on the evidence adduced on the trial. What the policy of the Government would be he did not profess to know, but asserted that the people might confidently repose in its determination to have even-handed justice distributed to all. He presumed that the rioters would be taken before the committing Magistrate, and if the testimony justified such a course, they would be returned for trial to the Court of General Sessions. In that event, if he presided in Court, he would deal out impartial justice and punish criminals according to the gravity of the offence. On this subject he desired to say nothing further, observing that he had no official communication on its regard. On his attention being called to the conduct of the Hibernians prior to the riot, in advertising drill-meetings and making preparations for an armed disturbance of the peace, he professed to have no cognizance of it, and did not know what would be done in relation to it. In his opinion a preconcerted design to engage in a riot was a very grave crime, and if proven it would be the bounden duty of the authorities to hunt up the offenders and bring them to justice. For his part he deemed that offence more culpable than that of those who actually participated in the riot, and would deal with them accordingly. Not thinking it necessary to pursue the conversation much further, our reporter left and called at the residence of Mr. ALEXANDER SULLIVAN, the Assistant District-Attorney, in Eleventh-street, with the view of ascertaining something definite in the matter. Mr. SULLIVAN was not at home, and it was stated that he would in all likelihood be found, either at the Manhattan Club or Delmonico's. Our reporter called at each of these places, but with the same result, and after a considerable hunt was compelled to return. A similar result attended the effort to "interview" Col. FELTON, his associate.

The Union League County Council on the Tammany Riot.

A regular meeting of the County Council of the Union League of America was held at their head-quarters, corner of Bleecker-street and Sowery, last evening, Mr. N. APPLETON in the chair. The following resolutions were offered by Mr. DAVID B. MELLUISH:

Resolved, That in the late surrender by the Tammany Party and Mayor HALL through Order No. 37, of the City Police and Judiciary to the lawless classes of this Metropolis, to a drunken, bigoted and lawless mob, we recognize the same principles and spirit that in '63, under HORATIO SEYMOUR, surrendered the lives and property of the citizens to the sixteen and orphan asylum burners of July 13 of that year, and the same spirit of executive imbecility and criminality that caused BUCHANAN to turn the nation over without a struggle to the rebels of '61.

Resolved, That the Tammany Ring, by allowing their employes on July 12 of last year to leave their work in the middle of the afternoon and break into a private park and murder innocent men, women and children there enjoying harmless amusement, and then, after the murders were committed, neither arresting or trying or convicting or punishing the murderers, or even discharging them from public employment, are morally responsible for the disorders and loss of life of the 12th inst., and should be held up to the just indignation and opprobrium of the whole public.

Resolved, That such a gang of aiders, abettors and supporters of ruffianism and disorder as this Tammany Ring have for years shown themselves to be, are utterly unworthy the confidence or support of either the City or the State.

Resolved, That all good citizens, irrespective of party, should unite to denounce and hurl from power, at the earliest moment, this infamous clique.

It was urged by some of the speakers that it was time kicking a dead carcass to denounce GARRET HALL and Mr. MAHER was earnest in the opinion that Gov. HOFFMAN'S name should be included as responsible. Mr. LUCAS thought there could be no question that Gov. HOFFMAN was aware of the impending difficulties, and that his tardy action was the result of the aroused indignation of the community.

Mr. MELLISH said he regarded KELSO as a man of wax, acting under the direction of HALL.

Mr. MCWATTERS thought HALL simply a Joseph Surface, and as much a man of WAX as KELSO. It could not be doubted that HOFFMAN knew what was going on.

Mr. CAMPBELL moved to amend in the first resolution, after the words "Order No. 37," by inserting "issued by Superintendent KELSO, and prompted by his masters, HALL, HOFFMAN & Co." The resolutions, as thus amended, were adopted. Several members were initiated, and the Council adjourned.

The Park Commissioners and the Rioters.

At the meeting of the Department of Parks yesterday, Commissioner WOOD proposed the following resolution, which was unanimously passed, the Chairman stating that orders had been issued from the Department to keep all the men at work on the 19th.

Resolved, That Superintendent WESTERVELT be requested to retain the names of the rioters and workmen who may have, contrary to orders issued by this Department, absented themselves from work on Wednesday, July 12, 1871.

All Quiet in Jersey City.

Jersey City wore its usual aspect of peace and tranquility yesterday, after the excitement of the previous day. On the whole, the deportment of the people was highly commendable, and the militiamen's task a very light one, except that they lost some sleep. The Fourth Regiment remained quartered in the City Armory all night, and were dismissed yesterday morning at 8 o'clock.

The parties arrested in Jersey City on Wednesday for carrying concealed weapons were each fined $20 yesterday. Those arrested for inciting to riot and carrying concealed deadly weapons are held for further examination.

Major-Gen. RUNYON has issued the subjoined order with reference to the New-Jersey State militia and the part they took in Jersey City:

HEAD-QUARTERS NATIONAL GUARD S. N. J., NEWARK, July 13, 1871.

GENERAL ORDER No. 9.—The Major-General Commanding takes occasion to express his gratification at the promptness with which his order of the 11th inst., for the service of yesterday, was responded to. The citizen-soldier on duty, no more important duty, render no higher service, than to assist in maintaining the good order of society, securing obedience to law, and protecting the rights of the people. The effective condition of the troops (the First Brigade) ordered out for active duty, and the readiness exhibited by the Second Brigade in their tender of service, are worthy of special recognition.

By command of

Major-Gen. RUNYON.

NOTES FROM THE PEOPLE.

A Response to Skyball the Second.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

I observe in your issue of the Senate, "Secret Societies," in your issue Sunday's paper, a letter presumptuously addressed to the head of the Navy Department by a person in Brattleboro, Vt., pretentiously signing himself "J. V. PHELPS, President of the Windham County Anti-Masonic Society," in which he, with rare pusillanimity, attempts to cast a slur upon, and otherwise bring into contempt our estimable townsman FREDERICK D. STUART, Esq. Mr. STUART, through solid worth, and many good deeds, has gradually risen to the prominent and distinguished position of Grand Sire of the Order of Odd-fellows in the United States, and is consequently in receipt of honors and well [illegible] attention from the great and good of the order from all foreign lands where the order flourishes.

He was connected as one of the Executive officers under Commodore PERRY, with the celebrated Japan Expedition—has frequently been honored with other prominent positions in the service of his country—and during the war of the rebellion was a most efficient volunteer officer in the naval service. He is a man of honest integrity—free from all "vain-glory and pooerisy"—a person entirely above fear and without reproach, whatever the anti-masonic PHELPS may say to the contrary. I am not an Odd-fellow, and am not very likely to become one, but if there is any inducement more than another which would incline me that way it would be the bright example of Grand Sire STUART, whose whole life, private and public, has been a career of unselfish, generous devotion to the cause of humanity; and there is not a single person at home, or abroad in the many lands where he is known, with whom he has come into familiar contact, who would not peruse, with feelings of deepest resentment, the puerile attempt of Mr. anti-Masonic PHELPS to put a stain upon him; and the malignity of that letter, so far-fetched, so causeless, and so unmerited, justifies me in the belief that its writer has sought to gratify his disappointment at some slight put upon him by a MASONIC or Odd-fellow association, and by no means in vindication of any old dead-letter law of the Grand [illegible] State's earliest secret societies.

Very respectfully yours,

GOOD-WILL.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

What about the coward, who, as Chief Magistrate of the principal City of the United States, surrendered to a mob before a blow had been struck? Will the Chamber of Commerce, the Merchants' and other Exchanges, the Union League and other clubs, unite to strip off whatever insignia of office he may have, and to publicly proclaim of him what they would of an American General who had surrendered his army the day before the battle, or of an American Commander who had given up his ship the day before the fight. I am a poor native of this State, whose fathers came here before the Revolution, and fought for this Republic in every war in which it has been engaged. I know I have no right to make such inquiries, but I have read of another kind of Mayor in a certain history of The Rise of the Dutch Republic. My head is full of the conduct of men in the good old times, and this must be my apology. If I have said anything to offend those who would be our masters. Yours, &c., S. B.

A Word to the Roman Catholic Clergy.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Why is it that the Roman Catholic clergy, who are so hostile to Masonry and all secret institutions, connive at the existence of Fenianism and Hibernianism, very many of whose members are in open communion with that Church? They are both secret and notoriously dangerous organizations, and were the clergy sincere in their professions they would not only condemn, but endeavor to suppress them by expelling all members of the church connected with them. It is time they took a new departure and acted more consistently with their professions.

CONSISTENCY.

HONOKAW, Tuesday, July 13, 1871.

The Two Proclamations.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

General Order No. 37 of the Superintendent of Police was a unique production, well calculated to eliminate from the public mind the last semblance of respect for our City rulers. It was the act of a moral coward, whose self-interest, and not a conscientious sense of duty, had prompted to sign and issue such an infamous document. And KELSO, the protector of our lives and property, our shield and hope in time of riot and bloodshed, did this disgraceful thing! Better, like CRANMER, to welcome the offending hand in the flame, than to have insulted American civilization and society as he has! I hold, sir, that he should have been manly enough to resign his post rather than subject New-York to such shameful disgrace, in bowing the knee to a threatening Papist rabble. I doubt not that "St. Patrick's Day," 17th March next, will see our cowering Mayor HALL brushing up his Emerald green, and thus arrayed, bowing and scraping before the delighted "boy-trotters," and "shillalah"-drivers from the taintrade of the City Hall, so that they may continue him in office to degrade the American and Protestant community. And we must suffer such shame, the authority of such an ignoble Chief Magistrate.

But here intervenes Gov. HOFFMAN, and revokes, to-day, the above KELSO order, and tardily permits the Protestants and Orangemen Associations to celebrate their festival. How oily and persuasive the opening of his proclamation, but, being well analyzed, how deceptive and "baseless as the fabric of a vision!" His Excellency is too late in that sinister preamble: "Having been only this day apprised of the actual condition of things, with reference to the proposed procession to-morrow, &c. He is too late, when we remember that for ten days past the Romanists have openly avowed their intent to shed Protestant blood, and enact their worst deeds of violence if the Orangemen should presume to march through our streets in peaceful procession. That order of revocation will not stay the feverish pulse of the inflamed populace of this public. It will not repair, it will rather render more evanescent the blighted and decaying fortunes of the priest-ridden Democratic Party. It is the merest gauze, and will not hide the sins of the Irish Tammany Ring. It will only cognize its author to the same measure of contempt which all intelligent peoples already have for their unscrupulous rulers. It is too late, Gov. HOFFMAN! The die is cast. The Kelso order and your own revoking manifesto have only fastened a heavier, quit-stone of political condemnation about your neck. The political [illegible] are sinking your Presidential aspirations in a bottomless abyss of scorn. Turn, then, while there is time, from your evil associates, and exemplify in practice the purer doctrines cherished in your earlier days, and we shall gladly hail with joy your "new departure," while now, in the dim light of this hazard proclamation, we only condemn. And let "grape and canister" be the last resource when mobs dictate to the rulers of a great AMERICAN METROPOLIS.

NEW-YORK, Wednesday, July 12, 1871.

A Neglected Shutter.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Among the honorable gentlemen who are supposed to have the management of the affairs of our City Government, and who, on the day of trial, flunk away from sight and were oblivious to the call of duty, thus proving themselves to be on the side of the mob, why are you so cruel and unjust as to omit the name of the orator par excellence of St. Tammany—the chivalrous, the poetic, the honorable RICHARD O'GORMAN? By so doing you have placed him in an extremely unpleasant position before his friends—the rioters. How are they to know that he has done their will, or indeed that he has not done his utmost to "squelch" them? The record of HALL, CONNOLLY and BRENNAN is eminently first-class, and they will be forever recognized as friends; but by your injustice in omitting O'GORMAN'S name, the eminent Corporation Counsel has the onus of proving that he did his share for their cause by not exerting his influence against them. As he is on the "make," and no doubt thinks there is "nothing worth having nowadays but office," (under Tammany,) we have no fear but he will make his record all right with his mob friends as good as HALL'S. It is unnecessary to say that the intelligent, law-respecting people of this City are aware that RICHARD O'GORMAN, who pretended to have so much influence with the contemptible, has not attempted to exercise it upon them during the past few days.

A FORMER TAMMANYITE.

NEW-YORK, Thursday, July 13, 1871.

A Double Check for the Mayor.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

This chief of the infamous Ring of New-York has now been compelled by an outraged people to surrender twice lately, to public opinion, in his attempt to crush liberty, as in the case of the Orange procession, and in his late [illegible] recommendation to the Police to violate the laws of the State made for the protection of domestic animals. The firm, temperate and [illegible] body of HENRY BERGH to the unprecedented course of the Chief Magistrate of a great City, counseling resistance to the laws, notwithstanding his oath to enforce them, is a good omen to the proclamation of Gov. HOFFMAN. Mr. BERGH disregarded his insolent and unlawful commands, and now the Governor of the State revokes his Roman Catholic, demagogical, vote-seeking order to suppress the rights of Protestant citizens. Is it possible that this unofficial, ungrammatical Ringmaster lacks brains to see what every one else beholds, namely, that a black cloud is forming over his head and those of his satellites, which will crush him to atoms? H.

Another Disgusted Democrat.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Shall the Americans of New-York City see themselves dictated to in all civic matters by an ignorant, fanatic mob of our Irish population. Shame! shame! Let every true American assert his birthright and wrest the power from the hot-headed, blood-thirsty rabble that sustain such inexcusable disgraces as TWEED, HALL & Co. in office. Well may the deepest feelings of all native-born Americans be stirred when such outrageous scenes as occurred today in our midstare at any time liable to dishonor us again. Hoping that you will publish this in your valuable Journal, as coming from one who has always professed to be a Democrat, but who will hereafter vote the Republican City ticket until the Democratic Party is cleared of this scum. AMERICAN.

The Slaughtered Militiamen.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Ought not the members of the Ninth Regiment who fell so gloriously yesterday in defense of the rights of all of us, have a public funeral, the day to be observed as a Municipal holiday, at least?

CIVIL AND RELIGIOUS LIBERTY.

The Cincinnati Rabbinical Conference and the Protestants.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

You would oblige me by publishing in your valuable paper the annexed explanatory statement, as a provisional reply to the protest against the Cincinnati Rabbinical Conference, issued by a member of Rabbinan Cantors:

Explanatory Statement.

If the circulated accusation of Atheism had been brought forward only against my person, I would never have vouchsafed the accusers any reply; but my utterances at the Cincinnati Conference were misrepresented, and used by antagonists for the purpose of blackening in the eyes of the world and discrediting the said assembly, of which I am a member. I owe, therefore, to the honor of this assembly to state openly herewith, that to whatever extent my utterances in question may have been misunderstood by some, it was never my intention, through the same, to deny the existence and individuality of God.

REV. DR. J. MAYER.

CLEVELAND, Sunday, July 9, 1871.

Stabbing Affray at Hoboken.

A difficulty occurred at Hoboken last evening between two lads, during which one of them was fatally wounded. Neither of the two young men was more than nineteen years old. These embryo rioters were named TIMOTHY COLLINS and SMITH REUBEN. They were standing alone at Grand and First streets, and were heard using high words, though the difficulty was not sufficient to attract attention until REUBEN cried out "I'm killed," and fell to the sidewalk. COLLINS immediately fled, and as REUBEN was insensible, the immediate cause of the trouble is not known. The body was taken into a drug-store at First and Willow streets, where a physician was called. The wound was an inch or more wide, of considerable depth, and the knife had completely severed the cartilaginous portion of the lower rib. The wound is on the left side, immediately under the heart, and as there was no external bleeding, the doctor stated that he would probably not live. He was taken to St. Mary's Hospital, and on the way had a number of rapidly-following convulsions. COLLINS had not been arrested at a late hour.

Barometer corrected for elevation and temperature.

Synopsis and Probabilities.

WASHINGTON, July 14, 1 A. M.—No material changes is reported from the Rocky Mountains and Pacific stations since Wednesday night. The low barometer which then existed on the upper lakes has moved to the north-east and disappeared, and the barometer has risen slightly on the Atlantic and Gulf coasts. The temperature has fallen on Lake Superior and risen on the lower lakes. Slight south-west winds prevail very generally east of the Mississippi, and the easterly winds of this evening have abated in the middle and Atlantic States. Rain is reported from Atlanta, Carolina and Tennessee, and clouds and rain with rain now prevails in the former State, as well as local rain in Southern Alabama and West Iowa. Elsewhere partially cloudy and clear weather are reported.

PROBABILITIES.

The barometer will probably rise very generally on Friday, with light winds. Local storms will probably be experienced to-night in Western Pennsylvania, but partially cloudy and clear weather are probable for the lakes and Atlantic coast during the day.

The Petersburg (Va.) Index accuses Gen. O. O. HOWARD of being merely a man of peace, of contracts and of speeches. An Iowa Democrat, one of the old sort, is out in a letter denouncing "the pusillanimous departure of the shoddy Democracy of Iowa into the Republican camp," and recommending that a convention of the steadfast political followers of THOMAS JEFFERSON be held at Des Moines, on the 15th of August, for nominations and campaign purposes.

According to the call for the Republican State Convention in Wisconsin, the Milwaukee Sentinel says: "We want a good ticket, composed of suitable and capable men—a short, honest, Radical Republican platform that shall fairly represent our principles without any blinkers, and that sustain the Administration of Gen. GRANT, and then on to victory."

They are having a funny contest in Peoria, Ill. A young man recently smoked a cigar to within about an inch of the tip without the ashes falling off. And now all the young smokers in Peoria are trying to smoke a cigar shorter than any one else without breaking the ashes.

Nashua, N. H., furnishes a ghost story. A staid citizen reports that for three years he has been grievously tormented at times by a strange noise that sounds like chopping wood, continuing for an hour at a time. At other times there is a noise as of moving chairs and tables in the kitchen, and even the sound of men's voices in earnest conversation in the cellar is heard. Again, on the roof there seems to be a clatter of hoofs, followed by the noise of pick and shovel in active use. His entire family, he says, have heard these strange manifestations, and no one has yet been able to explain the mystery.

One of the oddest questions ever submitted to lawyers is now puzzling those of Hartford, Conn. It seems that a man who recently died there left a widow, childless, but expecting shortly to become a mother. By his will he provided that if the expected child should prove to be a boy, two-thirds of the property should go to him, and one-third to the widowed mother. If, however, the child proved to be a girl, only one-third of the estate was to go to her, and two-thirds to the mother. The result, of course, was awaited with an interest even greater than that usually bestowed upon such events. The result is—the widow has become the mother of twins—a boy and girl.

J. PROCTOR KNOTT has been making, in Kentucky, what the Democratic papers of the State call "a brilliant speech, which comprised a withering arraignment of the new departure and afforded some strong meat for his weak-kneed brethren." He said that the new departure is a species of party strategy entirely too deep for his conception, unless it is for the purpose of constructing a platform upon which some favorite candidate for the Presidency may stand with safety and comfort to himself, or unless it be as an old farmer said the other day, when he asked his opinion of the "new departure," that some impatient Democrats seeing the Radical Party going to destruction on "a down grade with the breaks off," have determined to beat them by jumping on to the "cow-catcher."

The trial of ALFRED ZIEGENMEYER, for the murder of WILLIAM GUMBLETON in Chicago, in January last, was begun in the Criminal Court of that city on the 9th inst. Contrary to expectation, a jury was obtained on that day. STANTON BLAKE, of the firm of BLAKE BROTHERS & Co., of this City, and two brothers of the murdered man were present in the Court-room, as were the detectives, DIXON and ELLIS, who have worked the case from the beginning, and brought the accused back from Germany. The brothers, one of whom has come from Ireland, examined the body, which was exhumed on the day previous, for the purpose of identifying it if possible, but it was so much decomposed that they could not recognize the features. The height and outline of the body, and the fact that two teeth were missing, led them to the belief that it was the body of their brother. The Manufacturers' National Bank of Chicago has commenced suit in the Circuit Court against ZIEGENMEYER to recover on indebtedness of $7,981 50, procured of the institution by the use of the forged name of GUMBLETON upon a check drawn by BLAKE BROTHERS & Co. upon the Fourth National Bank of New-York City.

The Louisville Commercial complains earnestly of the outrages committed by a band of lawless men in Estill County, Kentucky. These outrages, it says, have continued for several months. Even a helpless woman was horribly whipped because of her refusal to promise that she would cease telling what she thought of such midnight marauders. The Trustee of Berea College was whipped for consulting with the blacks in Fitchburg, and several others for less offenses. Three men were murdered at the May election, in the Miller's Creek Precinct, and a mob of sixty men lately attempted the murder, at night, of a negro family in Fitchburg. Various threats have been made against the blacks in general at the Red River Iron-works, and against the skilled miners employed there, who have mainly come from other States. Individuals and whole families have been notified to leave at the peril of their lives, and mining operations in Estill County have for the present entirely ceased, and 400 operators have left. The Commercial says that something should be done at once to put a stop to these outrages, one of the principal leaders in which, it alleges, is a State Senator.

Ex-Senator ROSS has written a letter justifying himself for sending out, under his frank, the card of his son, PITT ROSS, a lad of fifteen, who has recently engaged in bill-posting. The Ex-Senator says he was unable to provide his boy, who did not desire to live in idleness, with the means of engaging in a more lucrative and refined (though not more honorable) business, and that the law explicitly provides that all correspondence to and from a Senator shall be free until the first Monday in December following the expiration of his term of office. He also makes a suggestion of his anticipations thus: "I expect to live to see the day when all the correspondence of the whole people of this country will be as free as is that of members of Congress and officers of the Government now. Every vote of mine in the United States Senate against the abolition of the franking privilege, and they have been many, has been given with that end in view. I sustain and defend the franking privilege as a step in that direction. I see no more reason in taxing the writer of a letter with the cost of its transportation than in taxing a suitor in the United States Courts for the payment of the expenses of that department of the Government. One would be a tax upon the administration of justice—the other is a tax upon the diffusion of knowledge and general information. Neither should have a place in a Government whose greatest safeguards are the general diffusion of intelligence among the people, and the accessibility of the Courts of justice to all."

REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS.

Matters at the Exchange yesterday, July 13, were quiet, no sales being effected, and the market was generally dull. In regard to real estate at private sale, there is considerable inquiry for desirable property, and some rumors as to large contracts having been made, with a view to the Fall business. This is probably the case, but as the negotiations are being carried on through brokers who are wise enough to maintain a discreet silence on the subject, it is not probable that the public will become informed of any transfers until the sales are consummated. The cottage residence at Passaic, N. J., offered on Wednesday by A. D. MELLICK, Jr., & BRO., was not sold, and the sale of suburban lots at Flushing, Long Island, embraced in the property known as the "Hospital Property," conducted by E. A. LAWRENCE on the same day, met with but an indifferent success. For today no public auctions are announced of either City or country real estate.

THE SARATOGA RACES.

Startling Effect of the News of the New-York Riot.

Gentlemen Telegraphing Frantically to Their Friends—Slackening in Pool Sales—Indifference of the Butterflies of Fashion—Exciting Races Yesterday.

From Our Special Correspondent.

CONGRESS HALL, SARATOGA, THURSDAY, July 13, 1871.

The overwhelming sensation Fire-bells have made in New-York has thrown a deep shadow over our festivities here. About 5 o'clock yesterday private telegrams began to arrive thickly from New-York covering dismay in all directions. Such reports as "Flooding in Fifth-avenue," "The Ninth Regiment fired on," "Thirty Rioters killed and eighty wounded," and "Three men of the Ninth Regiment and two of the Seventh Regiment killed," were likely to produce consternation. Three-fourths of the names on the boards and people on the piazzas are from the Metropolis, and any explosion there finds a quick and telling reverberation here. Upon gentlemen who have left unprotected families in the City, and there were hundreds of them, the announcements fell with fearful force. Men rushed about the piazzas shouting the terrible announcement to each other, and a crowd of pale-faced people to the telegraph office eager to send messages before the wires should cut the wires. The excitement for an hour or two was tremendous. The patent cry was "Home," which had been all day the inspiriting theme, seemed to have disappeared from the vocabulary. Men collected in excited knots in the halls and on the piazzas, and talked and raved and shouted in scarlet indignation over nothing but miserable scoundrels who had brought this shameful scourge on the City. I heard nothing but denunciations of the "Riots" and their authors, and I think I never knew a crowd so unanimous in its sentiments.

Of course, the very same people who did so were in the grand parlor of Congress Hall, whose halls after the news came, the crowd of merry-makers were dancing as much death and murder were not digging at the very foundations of the social system which is their butterfly existence possible. It is hardly to say that very few men were seen in the ballroom, and most of the ladies had to put up with boys or ladies for partners.

A CHECK ON POOL SALES.

The pool sales, which were one cause of the gentlemen's absence, were well attended, but the terrific news was a damper on the sales. The sale of papers about the Hotel was the only lively traffic carried on. The whole juvenile male population of the village appeared to be in the service of the Press. All the New-York papers less than twenty hours old went off at ten cents apiece, and the little afternoon paper of the village, containing a mere announcement that fighting had commenced, sold an enormous edition, and got out a supplementary extra, with about the same story, selling numbers of them late into the night.

AN AGREEABLE CHANGE.

Apart from this great disquieting episode, it is, it must be confessed, delightful here. Such weather as that of to-day and yesterday is an impossibility in the neighborhood of that great brick and stone furnace known as New-York City. The air is inexpressibly balmy, and the heat of the Summer sun is tempered by a cool breeze and half absorbed by the splendid old trees, and both seem to have a wonderfully revivifying influence on city human nature in particular. As we drove by the Congress Springs yesterday the new-mown grass on the smooth slopes of the hills sent up an odor which was a poem in itself. The springs themselves are very pretty, and it is very delightful to get your Congress water fresh for nothing instead of paying 50 cents for it stale. It is wonderfully interesting, also, to look into one of the springs and see it bubbling up into its little artificial well, as full of gas and bubbles and snap as a new-drawn glass of Vichy, and it is interesting to be told that the water in the well is seven feet deep, that the rush of bubbles never slackens, and that the spring is apparently inexhaustible. It is quite soothing when you look at the thing from the 50 cents a bottle point of view.

THE RACES.

The track yesterday was in unimpeachable condition at noon, and the crowd much larger than the day before, the morning train having been so heavy as to require two locomotives to draw it. The grand stand was much more crowded today than yesterday, with a large representation of ladies. Among the gentlemen here are Hon. John A. Griswold, Lieut.-Gov. Beach, and John Appleton, Esq., of D. Appleton & Co. Many on the usual list of celebrities are elsewhere for obvious reasons.

THE STEEPLE-CHASE.

The first race today was the steeple-chase, for all ages, over a course of about three miles, $800 to winner and $300 to second horse. The famous Oysterman, Col. McDANIEL'S horse; Julius, also from his stable, both bays, and Tammany, a bright chestnut, were the only starters. Oysterman was the favorite at odds of about $100 to $15, Julius being from the same stable and Tammany not standing high. The race raised a good deal of excitement, though it was not in reality a hard struggle, Oysterman being so much superior. Tammany pressed him unexpectedly close, however, and it seemed so probable at one time that he would win the race that considerable more interest was awakened than was shown in any of the struggles of Wednesday. Tammany led off at the start, but Oysterman caught him before he reached the first wall, which the two took together in beautiful style. Julius showing some temper, fell several lengths behind at once, and the race throughout was between Tammany and Oysterman. The long wall and water-jump was magnificently taken by both close together, eliciting rounds of applause from the grand staud. At the last hurdle they were two lengths apart, the favorite ahead. On the home-stretch Tammany drew up, and as they passed the string was only a length behind.

OTHER EVENTS.

In the second race the favorite Eclipticus was all but beaten by Sanford, who sold last in all the pools. Belmont, who sold second, came in a poor third.

In the third race, a three-quarter mile stretch, Orlolan surprised all by coming in ahead of the favorites Grinstead and Felicity, in the remarkable time of 1:17. The races on the whole were a wonderful improvement on those of yesterday, the steeple-chase exciting interest by its romance and novelty among ladies and outsiders, as well as among those not pecuniarily interested.

The following is a summary of the races:

FIRST RACE.

The first race on the programme for the day was a steeple-chase of about three miles over a fair hunting country, for which there were three entries, Oysterman, Jr., and Julius representing Col. McDANIEL'S stable, and Tammany entered by JOSEPH DONAHUE. There was not much interest attached to the contest among the connoisseurs, and not even the parest type could be found to take the most fabulous odds against the lucky McDANIEL. The course was well laid out, and reflected credit upon the talented Secretary of the Association, CHAS. WHEATLEY. There were thirty jumps. They were started from the field opposite the grand stand, jumping the first hurdle at the exire or three-quarter stretch, running down parallel to the Tammany was over first, Oysterman second and Julius third, the latter STRIKING. They then came to a hurdle, all of them going over beautifully in the same positions. The third jump was a wall, Oysterman and Tammany to-gether. Striking the first Tammany, by a way and led Tammany three lengths over the fourth hurdle. Julius ten lengths behind. The fifth jump was a wall, and they went over it without change of position. On the flat again Tammany closed a length upon Oysterman, and thus they went over the sixth and seventh hurdles, Julius in the meantime eating within three lengths of Tammany, the pace being very slow. The eighth jump was a stone wall, and going over it Tammany leaped beautifully, and got within a length of Oysterman, Julius having got within a length of Tammany. On the flat again, Oysterman got two lengths away from Tammany, and led them over the ninth, tenth and eleventh obstacles, which were a hedge, a water jump and a hurdle. They now entered the course on the three-quarter stretch, and Oysterman got three lengths away from Tammany, with Julius two lengths behind the latter. Entering the last mile, they came to a fence, and

This was a dash of one and three-quarter miles for all ages. There were seven entries, viz. GRINSTEAD'S chestnut filly by Lexington out of Sally Lewis, Orlolan, Felicity, Mohawk, Mary Howe, President and Magnonette. The following quotations will give an idea in what estimation the consecutants were held:

	Pools.	Field.	Total.
Felicity	$200	$200	$400
Grinstead's Entry	270	140	410
Orlolan	240	220	275
Mohawk	160	120	270

They were started on the extra stretch, and after four false attempts they got off, with Felicity first, Orlolan second, GRINSTEAD third, and President fourth, the other three in a rush. Going down the track they were hid by the dust, and when they appeared at the half-mile pole, Felicity was still ahead, with Orlolan second, President third, having taken that position from GRINSTEAD. As they went round the lower turn Orlolan rushed to the front and led a length at the three-quarter pole, and finally won easily by three lengths in 1:17½. Felicity was second two lengths ahead of GRINSTEAD, Mohawk fourth, the others nowhere.

THE BALTIMORE TRAGEDY.

Arrest of a Prominent Lady in Society Charged with the Murder of Gen. Ketchum by Poison.

On Monday bench-warrants were issued from the Criminal Court in Baltimore for the arrest of Mrs. E. G. WHARTON, the widow of the late Major HARRY W. WHARTON, of the United States Army, residing at No. 203 North Eutaw-street, in a locality fashionably known as "Hamilton-place," on the charge of the murder, at her residence, by poisoning, of Gen. WM. SCOTT KETCHUM, a retired officer of the United States service, and also with the poisoning, with intent to kill, of Mr. EUGENE VAN RENSSELAER, a book-keeper in the banking-house of ALEX. BROWN & SONS.

The lady charged with the crimes is among the most highly respectable, wealthy, and influential in Baltimore, and extreme caution has been exercised by her friends and the officers of the law in keeping secret the facts of the case.

What is now believed to be correct is thus told by the Baltimore Sun: "On the 23d of June last Gen. WILLIAM SCOTT KETCHUM, of Washington City, arrived in this city, and became the guest of Mrs. HENRY WHARTON, widow of the late Major HENRY WHARTON, a member of a well-known Philadelphia family, and an old friend of Gen. KETCHUM'S. On the next day Gen. KETCHUM was taken suddenly ill after partaking of a meal. He was attended by Drs. WILLIAMS and CHEW, and died on the 28th ult., at 3 o'clock P. M. His remains were taken to Washington for interment, where, upon a post-mortem examination, there were found in his stomach twenty grains of tartar emetic, which is a deadly poison when taken in large doses. The friends of the deceased communicated the fact to the Baltimore Board of Police Commissioners, who placed the matter in the hands of Marshal GREY and Deputy Marshal FERY, of our Police force, who, after an investigation, obtained a bench-warrant from Judge GILMOR for the arrest of Mrs. E. G. WHARTON. In consequence of the ill-health of Mrs. WHARTON, who is suffering from liver complaint, and her daughter, who is affected with disease of the heart, the authorities did not desire to commit the lady to jail until further action was had in the case, and the officers held her in custody in her own residence.

Yesterday morning a conference was held by the counsel of the accused, I. NEVITT STEELE and JOHN H. THOMAS, Esqs., with the Deputy State's Attorney, Hon. PINKNEY, Esq.—Mr. KNOTT being absent from the city—Judge GILMOR being present. An outline of the case of the State was presented to defendant's counsel by Mr. PINKNEY, the result of which was that it was decided to permit the case to take its course, and it will come up before the Grand Jury, which meets on Saturday next. Two servants in the house are also under surveillance. The warrant of arrest will not be served upon Mrs. WHARTON before the Grand Jury have acted in her case, provided she remains quietly in Police custody at her own residence.

Mrs. WHARTON and daughter, Miss SUSANNA, a young lady of some twenty-two years of age, had previously engaged passage for Europe in a steamer to sail today from New-York City. There is also another charge against Mrs. WHARTON, of feloniously poisoning Mr. EUGENE VAN RENSSELAER, a book-keeper for ALEXANDER BROWN & SONS, who is said to have had a business intimacy with the accused. A few days before the visit of Gen. KETCHUM, Mr. VAN NESS, while visiting Mrs. WHARTON, was given a glass of beer or punch, and soon after drinking it was attacked with illness, and fell upon the floor of the drawing-room in which he was quite unconscious, and was unable to be removed from the house for several days. He is said to be recovering. What evidence exists in this case has not transpired. The accusation with which Mrs. WHARTON is charged has astounded the community, and particularly the circle of society in which she moved. She is a lady apparently between forty and fifty years of age, of engaging manners, and is thought by her acquaintances to be incapable of such a crime from the promptings of any pecuniary motive which may be inferred in her case. Mrs. WHARTON lost her husband and also her only son HENRY a few years since. By the death of the latter she obtained upon a life insurance policy $40,000. Rumors have been circulated in connection with these deaths, but nothing of that character has been proved, and they have no connection with the present case, which will be laid before the Grand Jury on Saturday next.

The above is from the Baltimore Sun of Wednesday. The following additional particulars are from the Sun of Thursday:

"The evidence in part in the case of Mr. EUGENE VAN NESS, said to be in the possession of the authorities, is, that while on a visit to the residence of the accused, on the 24th of June, he drank a glass of beer, after pouring into it a few drops of tincture of gentian. He was immediately taken ill, and carried to a bed-chamber, where he was attended by Dr. E. C. CHEW, and also by Mrs. VAN NESS, his wife, until the Friday following, when he was removed to his home. Also that a glass of beer directly from the hands of the accused, was offered Mr. VAN NESS, and half tasted, that its contents were afterwards analyzed by Dr. CHEW, and found to contain fifteen grains of metal-emetic; tartar-emetic is an antimonial poison composed of tartrate of potassa and antimony, ten or fifteen grains of which will produce death; the occurrence on the 24th of June, the day of Gen. KETCHUM'S death in the same house of Dr. WILLIAM'S mysterious visit to note the Marshal of Police, and to the brother-in-law of Gen. KETCHUM, PAY-master-General BIRCH, as whose instance a post-mortem examination was made of the remains of deceased, resulting in the discovery of twenty grains of tartar-emetic; this quantity combined after the established vomiting."

Mrs. WHARTON, before her marriage, was Miss ELIZABETH G. MUSGRAVE, of Philadelphia, and is a sister of Dr. MUSGRAVE, now a prominent physician of Preston, Penn. Her daughter, who was to have sailed with her mother yesterday to Europe, was said to be a very interesting young lady, and is confined closely indoors from the occurrence of the tragical events around her, but she is in no way implicated in any of the charges made against her mother. Mrs. WHARTON, it is said, made persevering endeavors to obtain permission to proceed on her projected voyage to Europe, but was finally informed that she ought to see the propriety and necessity of remaining in this city, within the jurisdiction of the Court, until the charges against her were disposed of. It is also stated that she received information of the charge without manifesting any unusual excitement. Her friends insist that there is no evidence which will sustain the charges against her."

The Hallucinations of a Lunatic.

There is confined in the Bayonne Police Station, since yesterday, a crazy man who gives his name as CONRAD AHRENS, recently of St. Louis. He was captured in the woods by the Police, and his appearance represents not a little the semi-barbarian. This lunatic has very philosophic, but fictitious ideas. He believes himself the man who furnishes the rain, and he was resolved to make a contrast with the farmers to supply them with what rain they required for a reasonable compensation. In his boxing there, he had ripped open the chosen Newark Bay as a place well adapted for training a costly sea-horse he owned. He further ventured to assert that shortly before he left St. Louis he purchased the territory of an Indian tribe at $16 per acre. He intended governing it after his own fashion, if he could not sell for $10. This rogue awaits an investigation by the county physician.

Pigeon-Shooting at Greenville.

Two matches at pigeon-shooting (sweepstakes) took place at Greenville, yesterday, at which some good marksmanship was shown. In the first match five birds were shot at, each by HEDSLEY, ROBINSON and TAYLOR. The first and last killed every bird and fired off their tie, TAYLOR winning by 5 to 4. The next match was by TAYLOR, TULLER and PIERSON, TAYLOR and TULLER making a tie, when it was agreed that each should fire until he missed a bird. TAYLOR shot first, making 19 birds, and missing the thirteenth, when TULLER brought down 30 straight birds.

PATRICK LYNCH, driver of a dirt-cart, was sun-struck yesterday, while at work on the Pier at the foot of Twenty-second-street, East River. He was taken to Bellevue Hospital.

MARY CUNNINGHAM was overcome by the heat, yesterday, at the corner of Spruce-street and Cedar-place, and was cared for by the Police.

Yesterday, JOHN JOHNSON, of Morrisania, was found at rest at Thirty-seventh-street and Ninth-avenue, overcome by the heat. He was sent home.
